Authority OKs Loan Proposal

JEFFERSON — The Lower Ten Mile Joint Sewage Authority has accepted a loan proposal from Gallatin National Bank for interim financing during the construction of a $6.3 million sewage treatment plant.

Two banks, the other being First National Bank of Carmichaels, offered proposals for the $615,000. Acceptance depends on approval of all participating municipalities which must guarantee the loan. Representatives of each municipality have been asked to attend the authority's next meeting on March 14.

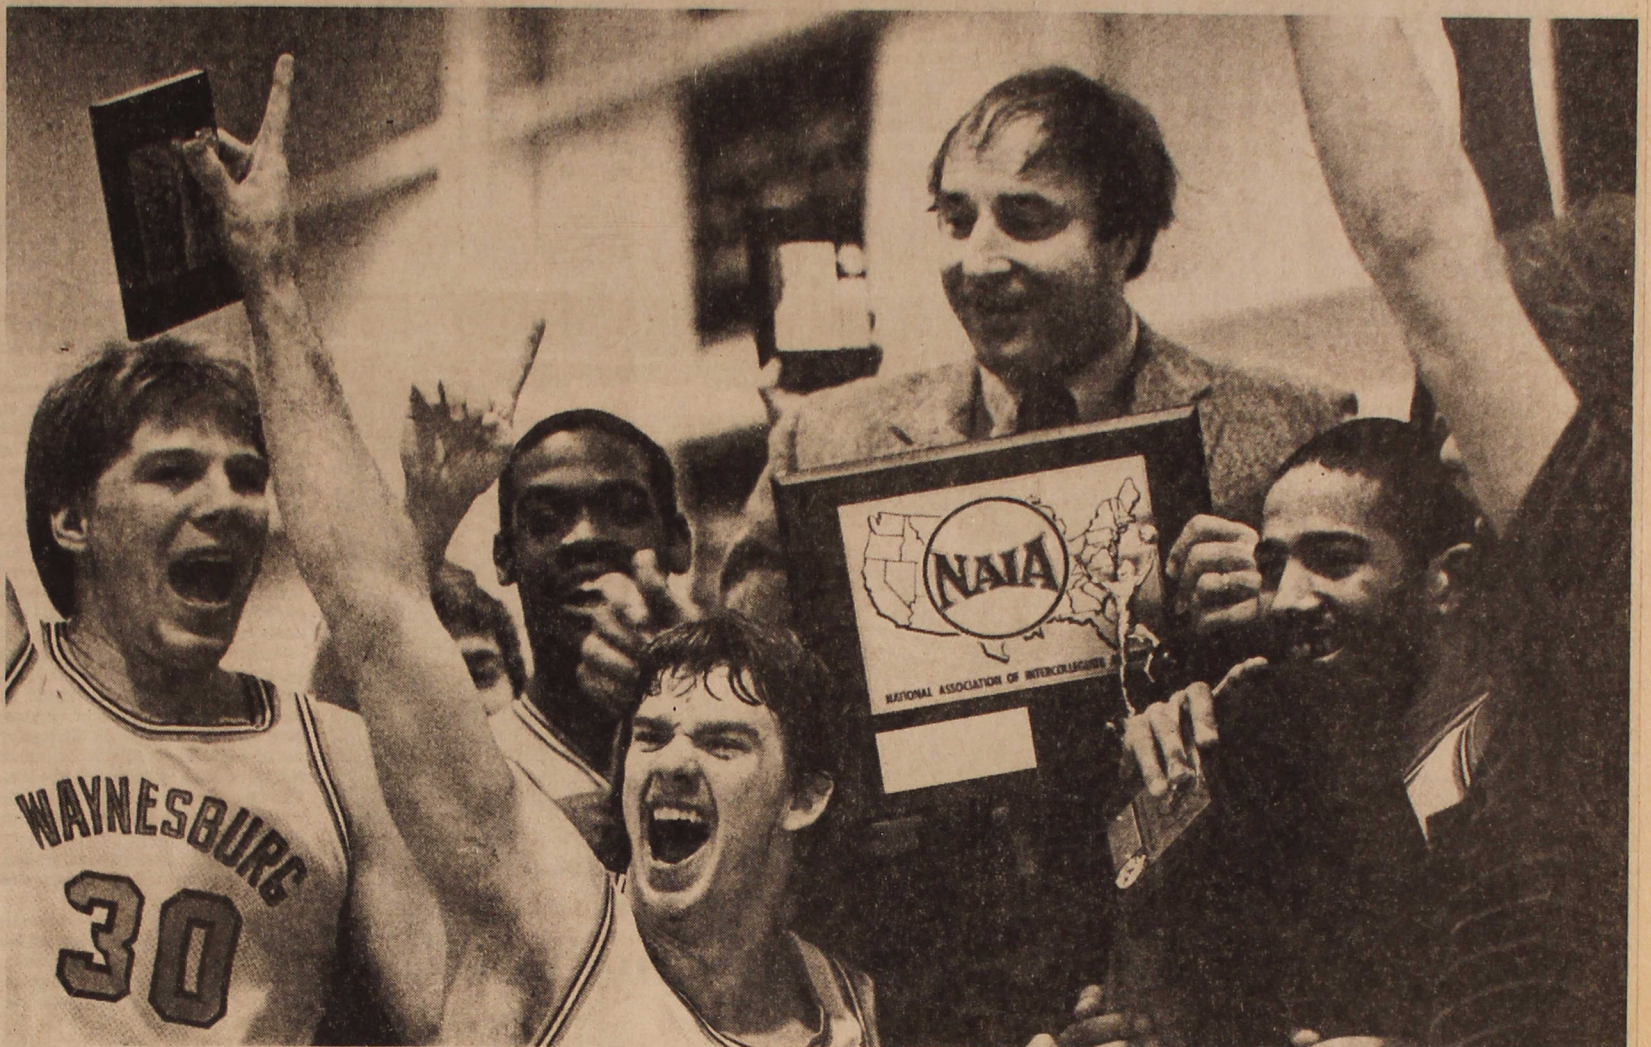

The solicitor and bond counsel also wanted more time to seek additional information concerning the reinvestment of borrowed funds.

The interest rate offered by the two banks was only one of the considerations the authority discussed in making its decision. Gallatin offered a flat 8.5 percent and First National offered a floating rate based on 55 percent of the prime rate. The prime rate is currently 10.5 percent making the bank's proposal about 5.78 percent.

Authority members considered that Gallatin has a trust department which will be important when the authority issues bonds.

The authority was not obligated to accept the lowest bid.

The interim loan is expected to pay for $330,700 in engineering fees, $97,500 for land acquisition, rights-of-way and attorney and recording fees, and $80,000 for the capitalized interest on the loan for two years.

Hunters Bagged 2,679 Deer In County Last Year

WAYNESBURG — The 2,679 deer killed in Greene County during the 1984 season contributed to the second largest harvest in the history of the Commonwealth.

According to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, there were 1,451 bucks and 1,228 antlerless deer killed in the county during the past season. Statewide, the game commission reported 76,500 antlered and 63,680 antlerless deer kills for a total of 140,180. The biggest harvest was in 1967 when 78,268 were killed.

Potter County, traditionally the leading deer producer, again was first during the most recent seasons, leading in the number of bucks, antlerless deer and total number of deer taken. There were 2,992 bucks and 3,162 antlerless taken in Potter.

The Winners

defeated the St. Vincent Bearcats 74-66 to advance to the NAIA tournament in Kansas City, Mo., for the second year in a row. The team left Tuesday morning for the tournament which begins March 13. (Story on Page 5.)

Sludge From Pittsburgh May Be Dumped In County

WAYNESBURG — According to an application received by the state Department of Environmental Resources, the Shannopin Mining Co. in Monongahela Township plans to receive and treat solid waste from Allegheny County.

Although the Greene County commissioners and the Monongahela Township supervisors received information about the plans last month, the prospect was not made public until Tuesday when questions were asked of U.S. Senator Arlen Specter during a public meeting in Waynesburg. Four property owners, one of whom lives within 300 feet of the proposed site, have expressed opposition to the proposal.

According to the letters addressed to the township and county, the source of the waste will be the ALCOSAN treatment plant in Allegheny County.

Property owners say they were informed three years ago by Shannopin Mining Co. that the property would be used for the disposal of non-toxic, non-hazardous, heavily limed waste water residue, and the material would be organic and thus subject to decomposition.

The site in question is located near Poland Mines.

However, the property owners said there was never any mention of solid waste being shipped to the site. According to letters to local officials, ALCOSAN would ship 300 tons of sludge by barge from Pittsburgh six days each week.

The sludge would then be trucked over Route 88 to the disposal site.

ALCOSAN, when contacted Tuesday, referred all calls to the DER office; however, the DER office said there was no one to answer questions at that time.

Landowners who appeared at the public meeting Tuesday also expressed concern about a sentence in the letter that referred to odor-control measures.

According to a letter received by the Greene County Planning Office and dated Feb. 25, DER will consider county recommendations but may exercise its right to override the recommendations provided justification is published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin.

The letter also stated if DER does not receive recommendations within 60 days, the county shall be deemed to have waived its right to review the proposal.

William Hook, solicitor for Monongahela Township, said township officials are aware of the plan and will investigate further. "I feel certain a public hearing will be scheduled with all involved to better explain the plan to the public," Hook said.

May Primary Election Slate Is Now Filled

WAYNESBURG — The lineup for the May 21 primary election was completed Tuesday, the final day on which candidates could file nominating petitions to get their names on the ballot for county and municipal offices.

On the county level, Sheriff Remo Bertugli of Rices Landing and Jury Commissioners Bernice Kuharcik of Mather and Rosalind Laur of Aleppo got through the filing process with no opposition developing to their bids for re-election.

Admission May Be Going Up At County Pools

WAYNESBURG — People who use county-operated swimming pools in Waynesburg and Carmichaels will probably be paying higher admission fees this summer.

The Greene County commissioners, at their meeting March 6, received a recommendation from the Department of Parks and Recreation to increase the price of both daily admissions and season passes to help offset operating without charge and there would be no change in the senior citizen (62 and over) charge of $1.

Family season memberships now cost $75 with no limit on the number of people in the family. The cost would be increased to $100 and it would be limited to a family of five, with another $10 being charged for each additional family member.

Carmichaels pool, with part of the cost being incurred by the need for a new chlorinator and major repairs to the filtration system. Revenues from the pool were $16,011.

The Central Pool, Waynesburg, cost $29,175 to operate last year, with revenues being $18,465.

"Part of the problem last year was the weather,"

A 2 percent discount is offered for payment of taxes in June and July. Those paid in August and September are collected at fact. After Oct. 1, a 10 percent penalty will be added — double the size of the penalty in effect until this year.

Rotary Told Of Lifeline Benefits

WAYNESBURG — Calling it the "gift of independence," Ted Rodkey, director of materials for Greene County Memorial Hospital, recently displayed an electronic device which provides instant communication between the hospital and an elderly or disabled person faced with an emergency at home.

Speaking to the Waynesburg Rotary Club, Rodkey explained that in addition to a small portable unit attached to the subscriber's telephone, the user wears a small "personal help" button around the neck. This button activates the home unit which in turn sends an emergency signal to a response center at the hospital.

He further explained that "Lifeline" works even if the telephone is off the hook or during a power failure.

Four units have been installed locally and several more are expected to be installed soon.

Sharing the program with Rodkey was Mary Parkinson, president of the Greene County Nurses Association. She accepted a donation from the Rotary Club toward the purchase of another unit.

Contest Was Easy As Pie For Ex-Waynesburg Man

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — Roscoe Morris, 89, of Johnson City, Tenn., formerly of Waynesburg has been crowned the champion pie baker at the Johnson City Senior Citizen Center.

The retired PennDOT employee, who lived at Avalon Court until three years ago, defeated nine other reluctant contestants.

After the three judges made their selection and called the winner to the front, one elderly lady questioned, "You didn't really make that pie did you?"

"Yes I did, I made that pie from start to finish," Morris quickly replied.

The idea for a "men only" baking contest was initiated by the center's program director. "The men are always playing pool. All the cooking contests are done by women. We wanted to do something to get the men involved," the director said.

Since February was National Cherry Month, a cherry pie contest was the logical choice.

Although it took a bit of persuasion at first, 10 men agreed to give it a try. Their creations ranged from gooey cobbler to fluffy cream pies. One man had a neatly latticed top crust.

The entries were judged on taste, texture and appearance.

Morris, on accepting the top prize, told how he had baked the pie using a recipe taught to him by his wife. "When she was sick several years ago, I had to wait on her. She would tell me how to cook the meals and I would do it," Morris said.

He was married to the late Edna Orndoff and is now making his home with his daughter, Loreen Erwin.

"Now I can make all kinds of pies," he said smiling with pride. Unlike many prize-winning cooks, Morris was not at all reluctant to share his recipe.

"I made sure I bought good canned cherries. I used crust mix and just rolled out the dough, put in the cherries, added one-fourth cup of sugar and put the top on," he told a reporter.

"I used to invite three or four ladies over to play dominoes. I always fixed a big meal of ham, potatoes and gravy for them. They were really surprised. At my age, they didn't think I could do anything like that. Now I make meals for my daughter and granddaughter," Morris added.

With all that experience behind him, it did not take much to coax him into entering the pie contest.

"I'm just fool enough to get into something like that," he said. Of course, there was a little incentive — first prize was a brand new pool cue.

Not all the entrants had experience. For example, Buck Hodges said he had never attempted to cook anything other than eggs before baking a cherry pie for the competition.

He gave the following tips for first-time bakers:

"Go to the grocery store and look for an elderly woman. Ask her where the cherries are and which kind are the best. Then go into another store and find another elderly woman and ask her how to bake a pie. Then go home and read the back of the can and go by that," he said.

Whatever method he used, the result was an attractive and tasty cream pie.

David Walter's entry did not fare so well.

"I had it in the oven baking and then my daughter called. I got to talking to her and let the pie burn. So I threw it away."

United Way No Panacea For Meeting All Needs

When the United Way program was begun in Greene County some six years ago, many people felt that it would bring an end to fund drives held by individual organizations which provide services to county residents.

To some extent it has, but the broad demands made on United Way funds makes it impossible for that agency to completely meet the needs of some of the organizations to which it contributes.

A case in point is the Red Cross, whose Greene County chapter will receive a $7,500 allocation this year from United Way. While the allocation is generous considering the amount available for distribution, it falls well short of meeting the complete need.

The Red Cross, for many years, has provided assistance to military men and women and their families. It gives aid to victims of fires and other disasters. Many transients who have found themselves without funds far from home have applied to it for help.

The Red Cross sponsors at least 16 bloodmobile visits each year to meet the county's blood needs. First aid, swimming and C.P.R. classes have provided lifesaving skills to hundreds of county residents. The chapter also contributes funds to help support the national Red Cross effort when a major disaster need arises.

The Greene County Red Cross is holding its annual fund raising effort this month through a mail campaign with the hope of raising the additional $15,000 it needs to maintain these vital local services.

The United Way has filled a vital need in the community, but some agencies such as the Red Cross still must still depend on the generosity of county residents who are willing to give a little extra to help those in need.

When you read newspapers of 90 to 100 years ago, you realize how glad you are that somebody finally took hold of advertising departments and put a new commodity into them — truth.

The idea of truth in advertising seems to have been foreign to the old papers. Ads often masqueraded as news articles, and other ads promised to enable the reader to do just about anything except sprout wings.

In a "Waynesburg Republican" of 1896, an article at the top of the front page was headlined "Tired Women." "Depression of the nervous system," the article began, "at the approach of spring is a fertile source of blood impurities. That tired feeling, which is the natural result of the depressing effect of warm weather immediately after the invigorating cold of winter, quickly disappears when Pe-ru-na is taken."

Oh. This is a little different from the medical articles we're accustomed to. It cites no scientific studies, quotes no doctors, and ignores the surgeon general. Still, it says, "Thousands are daily testifying to its priceless benefit." You name it, they can cure it. "General lassitude, dull, heavy sensations, continual feelings of irregular appetite, and sometimes loss of sleep. Pe-ru-na meets every indication and proves itself to be perfectly adapted to all their varied peculiarities.

"Pe-ru-na invigorates the system, rejuvenates the feelings, restores the normal appetite and procures regular sleep." And now we come to the tired women. "This tired-out feeling is especially true of the housewife in spring time — used up, fagged out, jaded and weak. There are thousands of them everywhere. A few bottles of Pe-ru-na would do them untold benefit."

I suppose people really did send for this stuff. And the contents weren't listed on the bottle when you got it, either. I wonder what it was.

And I see there really was a "Swamp Root" elixir. It was said to cure "Pain in the Back, Kidney Complaint, Disordered Liver and Dark Circles Under the Eyes," and a lot of other things. You could buy it in the fifty cent size or one dollar size. And I suppose if you took enough of it at once, you might not be cured, but you wouldn't care any more, either.

A Dr. Scott, of New York City, was looking for "agents" to sell his "beautiful Electric Corsets." No explanation was given about what the corsets were supposed to cure, and maybe that's just as well.

Then we had "Kidney-Wort," which was said to cleanse the blood and cure everything from rheumatism to liver complaint to malaria. "Tutt's Pills" were said to be, "the Greatest Medical Triumph of the Age." Take Tutt's and you'd be cured of "loss of memory, with a feeling of having neglected some duty."

I think I could use those, but Tutt's, unfortunately for their credibility, also advertised a hair dye which "acts instantaneously" on "gray hair and whiskers." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was aptly named, and promised not only to help your cough, but to cure consumption.

A Dr. Salm, of Columbus, Ohio, planned to be in town for a week, and claimed that, "he cures after all others fail." He would demonstrate for the locals "The most successful and scientific treatment of all diseases and weaknesses of mankind." "No experiments or failures," he said. And, "Curable cases guaranteed."

I suppose he'd be arrested today. I think I'd rather try a swig of Pe-ru-na, if not Swamp Root.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

Members of the Waynesburg College faculty posed for a 1903 Christmas card. Surprisingly, there were five women on the faculty, or perhaps they were secretaries.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column by John O'Hara first appeared in the Waynesburg Republican in June, 1975.

"You've Come a Long Way, Baby," was the catch line of a popular song years ago to express a girl's progress in the art of love and romance.

Historians of the legendary one-room school houses which once abounded in Greene County can now say the same thing about the girls who majored in "El Ed" (elementary education) in college and are now teaching in the grade schools.

To be more precise, in the consolidated elementary schools. What has happened to the teachers of both sexes at that level is a lot more than the mere passing of the 40 years between now and 1935.

The unbelievable changes in their status, especially their pay and working conditions, was put into sharp focus the other day when someone came up with a copy of a teacher's contract between a teacher and one of the rural township school districts back in the B.C. (Before Consolidation) era.

The identity of neither the teacher nor the township isn't of import here because the same conditions could have prevailed with any district or any teacher of those years.

Taking first things first there was the pay — exactly one hundred dollars per month. That was for an eight month term, for which the teacher had to attend college for years or its time equivalent in summer schools, night extension courses or maybe intermittent years on campus.

That was long, long before the days of collective bargaining, inflation and automatic increments which put the present monthly salaries comparable to an entire year's pay then.

Now days the janitorial chores are also covered by collective bargaining in most districts but it was a different story in 1935.

If anyone doubts it, just ponder these excerpts from paragraph eight in that fine print of a lady school marm:

"It is Mutually Agreed, that the ordinary duties of Janitor (such as sweeping of the floors and making fires) shall be performed, or caused to be done by the said (Teacher) the necessary fuel and brooms to be provided by the Board of Directors."

In another paragraph it was stated that if "the said teacher fails to attend two writing meetings in succession this contract shall be null and void."

On along in the fine print it specifies that "...said teacher also agreed that she will not read any story books or magazines at school other than the ones in the school library..."

"She also agrees not to do any fancy work or sewing at the school house..."

The teachers were also admonished, in the contract, to make sure all toilets (which were old fashioned outside privies), "to be scrubbed at least every two weeks."

The lengthy contract also stipulated that any teacher or principal could be dismissed at any time for immorality, incompetence, intemperance, cruelty, negligence and, of all things, using tobacco.

(Students last year petitioned one board to have their own smoking rooms, just in case anyone still think times haven't changed.)

Matrimony and teaching apparently didn't mix too well for female teachers in the eyes of school directors 40 years ago as any teacher not married at the start of a school year could be dismissed if she became wed during the school term.

And which, in view of the preponderance of married women now teaching really exemplified they really have "Come a Long, Long Way," from those restrictive days of the 1930's.

Six-year-old Amber Stewart has a long and lonely walk home from school.

Her Walk's Not Long Enough

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

OAK FOREST — If 6-year-old Amber Stewart lived 528 feet farther down the road she could catch the school bus in front of her home and not be expected to walk 1.4 miles over an isolated dirt road by herself, often times in pitch darkness.

According to the school code, as adopted in 1949, elementary students who live less than 1.5 miles from a bus stop must walk.

Wyletta Stewart has been battling with the West Greene School Board for months in an effort to have the bus stop at her home.

Although Mrs. Stewart is aware of the 1.5 mile rule in the school code, she points out exceptions can be made if the road is considered hazardous by the state Department of Transportation.

Mrs. Stewart considers the road hazardous because neighbors have dogs that often run loose and because two robberies have occurred at homes along the road in the past two years. School officials say that has nothing to do with the road being hazardous, citing there must be a high-accident rate or something of that nature to be considered hazardous.

Mrs. Stewart has about given up on the school board changing its mind and is now pushing to have the school code changed. Her pleas for help attracted the attention of a Pittsburgh television station and resulted in a short segment on the evening news last week.

The story apparently touched the hearts of many other families because the television station received more than 1,000 letters within a few days.

Mrs. Stewart said her situation received more attention because of the recent incident in Butler County where a small child was apparently abducted shortly after getting off a school bus in a rural area.

A mother of three, Mrs. Stewart points out there are 1.5 million children reported missing each year in the United States. Although the majority are parental abductions, there are between 2,000 and 6,000 who simply disappear and their cases remain unsolved.

It's not only a matter of a little girl having to walk that distance, but the fact she is on a lonely road. There is only one other home between her house and the bus stop. For most of the distance, the girl is not in sight of another person.

Mrs. Stewart works for the Area Agency on Aging and has irregular hours. It is not always convenient for her to drive her daughter to the bus stop by the 7 a.m. deadline. Although her husband is unemployed, Mrs. Stewart must use the one family vehicle to get to work.

Mrs. Stewart has contacted state Rep. H. William DeWeese but the lawmaker said his hands are tied because of the state regulations.

Paul Polink, superintendent of the West Greene School District, said Tuesday that Mrs. Stewart's case is not unique. "We have several parents in the same predicament and we can't make an exception for just one family," he said.

Polink said a survey was made, and to provide bus service to those families in a similar situation would be very costly to the district.

The situation will be twice as bad for the Stewart family next fall. They will have another child eligible for first grade then.

Jackets On To Kansas City, Again!

By Tom Rose, O-R Sports Editor

WAYNESBURG — The gang that wouldn't shoot straight, or at all, last November has grown up.

Facing footsteps most experts felt were too large to fill by talent that was either too green or undersized, the Waynesburg College Yellow Jackets were figured to follow the tradition of one-year wonders in the NAIA District 18.

But something strange happened, oh, about 13 games ago. That's when this gang found the confidence to shoot, and a slipper that seemed to fit snugly in the legend of the champions past.

And because of it, the Yellow Jackets are still champions.

Thanks to Wednesday night's tension-filled 74-66 victory over arch-rival St. Vincent before a sellout crowd and countless others left standing outside College Gym unable to purchase a precious ticket, the Yellow Jackets are now heading to Kansas City, Mo., for next week's NAIA Basketball Tournament at the Kemper Arena.

The District 18 championship is the third in five years for Waynesburg, now 23-4 overall, and second straight. It breaks a jinx that has haunted district winners since Edinboro successfully defended its title in 1976. The victory also serves as a landmark for area basketball as all three local colleges won their respective conference championships this season.

"Yeah, I'm surprised that we won it two years in a row and they've (the public and the district) got to be surprised that we've won it," Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa said after the emotional trophy presentation at mid-court. "People have made it pretty clear that repeating in the district is nearly impossible to do. And to have done it with a group that wasn't up to the task early in the year, well..."

Marisa's voice began to trail off because these Jackets were indeed a team searching desperately for an identity at the start of the season. They were 1-2 after three games and had played poorly in a lopsided loss at California University.

Since then Waynesburg is 22-2 and winners of 13 straight. None of those victories in the streak were more difficult than the championship game, as expected.

But in direct contrast to the last meeting between these schools, this was a basketball game and not a brawl. The feelings are still quite strained, but they were shelved for this showcase of NAIA basketball in Western Pennsylvania.

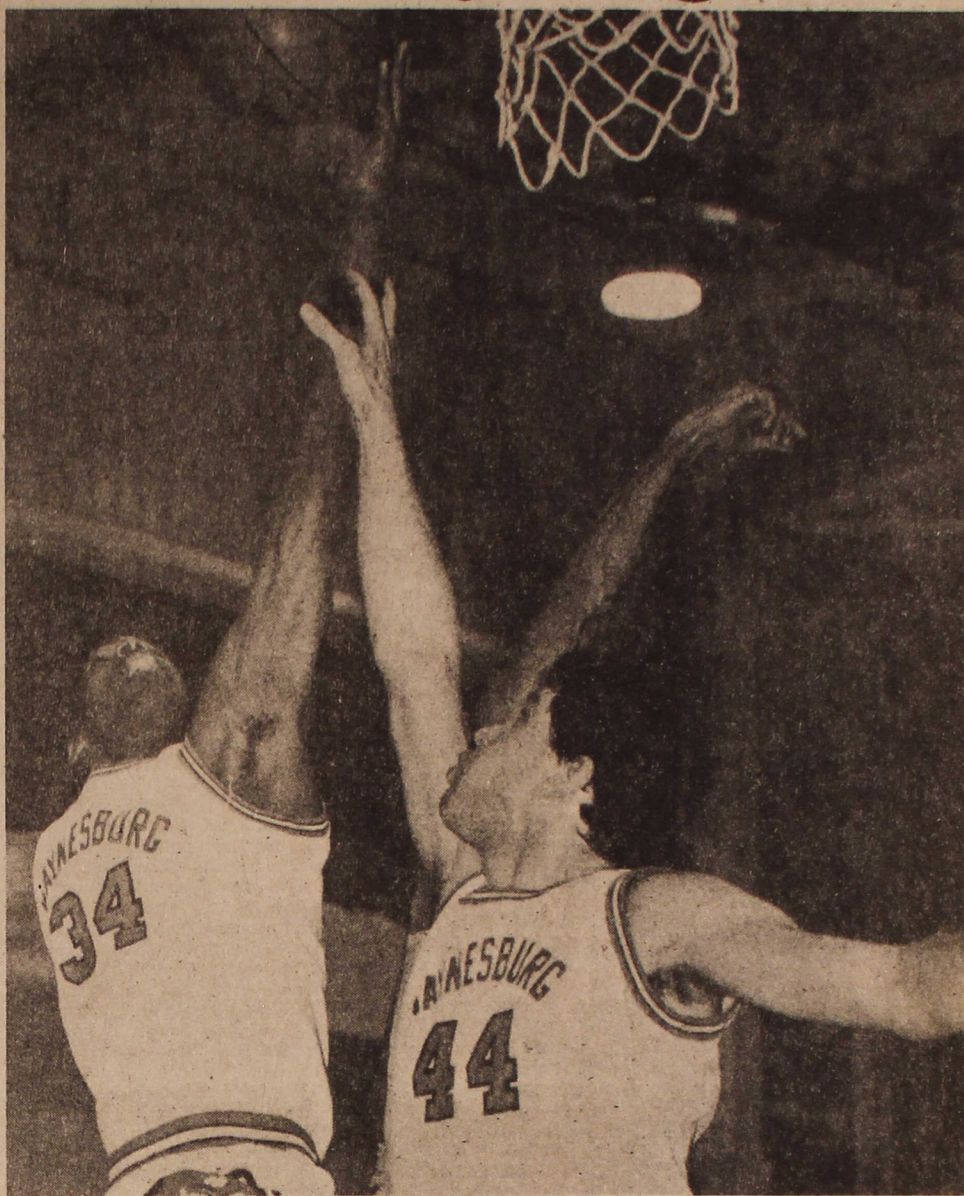

Throughout the first half St. Vincent (20-11) managed to dictate the tempo of the game with its offense and defense. A patient attack held off two Waynesburg bids to blow the game open, and a triangle-and-two defense on Waynesburg's Paul Stanley and Harold Hamlin and box-and-one defense on Stanley had the Jackets' out of sync.

"I was worried for a while," Stanley, who shook off the constant pressure long enough to score a game-high 22 points, said. "We were making dumb mistakes and I didn't want us to fall too far behind."

Waynesburg trailed 37-34 at half-time, but Marisa's adjustment to a man-to-man defense and the Jackets' flawless execution of their patented five-man-eight offense turned the momentum of the game. St. Vincent went nearly 15 minutes between field goals while the Jackets went on a 17-4 run to grab a 53-43 lead that wasn't a lock, but certainly a valuable piece of insurance.

"The five-eight is not only a free play but a psychological play as well," Waynesburg point guard Tim McConnell, who hit eight of eight free throws and finished with 14 points, said. "When we run that I know players on other teams are thinking 'Oh no, here it goes.' We wait for a breakdown and bang, we hit them with a layup. It gets to their minds."

It certainly worked well against St. Vincent and protected the Jackets as well, who were plagued with unusual foul trouble throughout the second half. And when it came down to a foul shooting contest at the end, Waynesburg more than held its own to hold off the Bearcats.

Harold Hamlin (34) and Don Crawford go up for a rebound.

Drury Knows All About Winning

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

With the type of schedule the men's basketball team at Drury College, Mo. plays, their planned activity for this week seems rather normal.

The Drury Panthers make a living out of playing big time schools. Or at least that's what fifth-year head coach Marvin Walker calls it.

"We think we have a fine program and I think our tough schedule has a lot to do with it," Walker said Sunday night in a telephone interview. "We hope that playing top teams will pay off at tournament time."

Well Walker and the Panthers will find out for sure Wednesday night beginning at 10 p.m. EST when they play Waynesburg College in the first round of the 48th annual NAIA National Basketball Tournament at the Kemper Arena in Kansas, City, Mo.

And Drury, which has a 24-9 record and is seeded 18th out of 32 teams, knows all about winning.

The Panthers have advanced to the national tournament three out of Walker's five seasons as head coach and five times in the last eight years. Drury was the NAIA national champion in 1979.

"I think we have a great tradition," Walker said. "We were national champs in '79 and we try to

"We hope that playing this type of schedule will give us a better chance in Kansas City," said Walker. "We have good conference play and we try to play other top teams and we have been. We played Fort Hayes well and they had three starters back from their championship team. We had a lead in the second half and had a real chance to win it."

Drury's season hasn't been without problems, though, as its nine losses indicate. The Panthers lost forwards Kelvin Parham and Kevin Arnold to injuries midway through the season and proceeded to lose three of six games before Parham returned. Arnold is still questionable for the Waynesburg game.

"Since Parham (a 6-4 junior who averages nine points a game) came back we won our last regular game and then three playoff games," Walker said. "He was a big help and if he wasn't hurt, I think our record would have been a lot better than 24-9."

In Drury's starting lineup are guards Tom Deffebaugh, a 6-0 senior averaging 16.4 points a game, and Ted Young, a 6-0 sophomore who averages 12.9 points and 6.8 assists. At forward will be Parham and either Tony King, a 6-5 freshman averaging 9.6 points and 6.1 rebounds or Mike

Waynesburg Puts On Class Act

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — For a contest billed more as a rematch than an athletic event to decide a basketball championship, it was a sorry performance. There were no altercations, no knockdowns, no standing meetings between the teams, including the bench-clearing fight at the end of the game in Waynesburg.

"I never expected otherwise," Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa said after the game. "We have to stop magnifying one incident that happened a while ago after a game was for guard than the forward position he plays, grabbed a game-high 14 rebounds and added 10 points.

His mind was definitely on the game. "We wanted to win so bad because Coach Bernie (Matthews of St. Vincent) said he would never come down here again," Hamlin said.

said. "I guess that answers your question."

But Waynesburg's Harold Hamlin, who scored 17 points and clinched the win with a slam dunk on a pass from Paul Stanley with 29 seconds to play in the game, offered much more.
