Chamber Of Commerce Marks 50th Anniversary

By Marcia Biddle, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — "Coal is a fragile industry," Clifford E. Jones, president of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, warned more than 300 people who attended the Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce annual banquet Saturday night.

The banquet marked the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Chamber in 1935 and included special recognition of the only two surviving founding members, who are still active in the organization.

Jones, a former member of the Public Utility Commission and chairman of the state Department of Environmental Resources, said the coal and steel industries are competing against foreign governments, and losing. "If the coal industry has to take a few more hard lumps, it is not going to survive in the state it is in today," he warned.

As examples, he cited Colombian coal, which is being shipped to Florida and then barged inland, and South African coal, which is undercutting American coal in the European markets.

Of all the strip mine companies in the state, Jones said, 50 are in bankruptcy or on the verge of it.

"All the steel companies are struggling for survival and more could very well go into Chapter 11 bankruptcy, like Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel," he said.

He asserted that U.S. Steel has the best chance of surviving because of the company's diversification and purchase of Marathon Oil, but he added, "if anyone says to you we can't get out of this dilemma say to him that we can. Since our industries are not going to come back to the strength they were, other industries must take their place."

Jones mentioned as possible aids tourism and the new convention centers in Erie and Pittsburgh, which bring customers to service and retail businesses. He also mentioned Carnegie-Mellon University's new $5 billion defense contract, calling it a major coup that could make southwestern Pennsylvania a national software center for the computer industry.

This new type of industry could provide major growth for the area, he said, cautioning that preparations must be made if its potential is to be realized.

Another field he spoke of was banking, with its potential for growth through statewide and future interstate banking. With those possibilities, he predicted that Pittsburgh could become a national banking center.

Warning again that we are not competing with Ohio and West Virginia but with Taiwan, Germany, England, Colombia, Japan and other countries, he asked, "What can we do?" His conclusion: "We have to prove we want new industry. We cannot harass them and can't pass punitive laws against business."

Among selling points for this area, he cited relatively low living costs and said the area has the lowest power costs in the country, comparing favorably even with government-produced power at the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Jones concluded by saying he believed that Pennsylvania can recover from the devastating blows suffered by steel and coal.

"It will take government, but also local people working together to convince industry to locate here," he said.

A highlight of the banquet was the presentation of plaques to Charles I. Donley and Richard L. Baily as two of the founders and the only surviving members of the Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce, which was established 50 years ago by nine Carmichaels residents.

The awards were presented by banquet chairman Sara L. Ruth, who noted that Baily, now 92, had served as president and Donley, now 93, as vice president for the first two years, after which they exchanged positions "to help keep the fledgling organization alive and expanding."

This year also marked the 40th consecutive year the banquet has been held, Ruth noted.

Stephen McCann, master of ceremonies for the dinner, presented copies of his booklet, "A History of Carmichaels Businesses," to Thomas Gerace of Bowly Library; William Gnatuk of Flenniken Library; Judge Glenn R. Toothman, representing the Greene County Historical Society; and Dr. Dolores Zoldos, superintendent of the Carmichaels Area School District.

McCann explained that some 100 people wrote short histories for the booklet, which was produced so children could find historical information on the subject. The booklet is available for purchase.

Chamber of Commerce President John Brodak gave the address of welcome and 1984 Coal Queen Kathy Sutphin of Jefferson-Morgan High School was introduced. A dance followed the banquet.

Court Refuses To Lower Bond In Child Abduction

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Court refused Friday, April 26, to lower the bond set for one of two persons charged with forcibly taking two children from a mobile home in Jefferson Township on Jan. 17.

Donald Wayne Stephens, 46, and his wife, Erma L. Stephens, 25, of Westbury, N.Y., have been bound over to court on charges arising from the abduction of Mrs. Stephen's two children from the home of her former husband and his second wife, David and Valerie Conaway of Waynesburg R.D.2.

Stephens has been charged with burglary, simple assault and conspiracy. His wife has been charged with burglary and conspiracy. Mrs. Stephens was released when she posted a $10,000 property bond, but Stephens is being held in the Greene County jail in lieu of $20,000 bail.

His attorney argued that it was discrimination to set his bond at twice that of his wife when they were charged with the same crime. But District Attorney Charles Morris argued that he played a more active role in the abduction and faces the additional charge of simple assault, justifying the magistrate's action in holding him under a higher bond.

The children, David Conaway Jr., 6, and Crystal Gayle Conaway, 7, are presently back in the custody of their father and stepmother following a hearing which was held in New York in March. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens, who originally fought extradition on charges brought by state police in Greene County, were returned to the county this week. A third man who was involved in taking the children from the Conaway home has never been identified.

The unidentified man went to the mobile home on Jan. 17 posing as a delivery man and got into the house, where he threatened Mrs. Conaway with a pistol and said he was taking the children.

At the hearing in New York, Mrs. Conaway testified that the man then called Mr. and Mrs. Stephens to come into the house, after which Stephens took her to the bedroom, put a gag in her mouth, and tied her up with rope he took from a paper bag. She said he then took out a knife, ripped the telephone cord from the wall, and left with the children.

At the hearing in Greene County Court Friday, Stephens' attorney, David Pollock, said that his client had never threatened Mrs. Conaway with the knife.

He also said that Mrs. Stephens had been given legal custody of the two children by the court in Fairmont, W.Va., and that they were with the Conaways only because Mr. and Mrs. Stephens had taken them there sometime previously when they were in the process of moving.

Morris pointed out, however, that a new custody hearing had been scheduled by the West Virginia Court and was to have been held the day after the children were taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephens were arrested in New York after their whereabouts was discovered when a request for school records was forwarded to the Jefferson-Morgan School District from a school district on Long Island.

Dead Woman May Be Linked To 5-State 'Redhead Murders'

LITTLETON, W.Va. — It has been over two years since the nude body of an unidentified woman was found along Route 250 near Littleton, W.Va., and just across the Greene County border.

Police still do not know the identity nor the cause of death. However, there is now speculation the incident may be connected with a series of baffling homicides known as the "redhead murders."

Between six and 11 women may have been the victims of a serial killer, who apparently preys on prostitutes, hitchhikers or those without family ties. Many of the victims had red or reddish hair.

The local victim, discovered in early February 1983, was between 35 and 45 years old with a Caesarean scar. She was 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weighed about 135 pounds. She had auburn hair and her toenails were painted orange.

An autopsy failed to determine the cause of death, but police believe she was strangled.

Law enforcement officers from five states met last week in Nashville, Tenn., to review cases in their jurisdictions.

Six women have been found along interstate highways in Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee. All of the women were either strangled or suffocated and their identities remain a mystery.

Trooper Norman Wood of the West Virginia State Police stationed at Hundert, W.Va., told the Observer-Reporter there could be some connection with the 2-year-old case he has been investigating.

Wood plans to contact authorities in Tennessee and exchange information.

According to David Davenport, an agent with the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation, the latest victim was found April 1 when a red-haired corpse was recovered along Interstate 75 outside Corbin, Ky.

Anyone having information that may help in identifying the body found near Hundert are asked to call Trooper Wood at 304-775-4488.

VICTIM — West Virginia police are still trying to learn the identity of this woman whose nude body was found along Route 250 near the Greene County border in February 1983. Police say the incident may be connected with the "redhead murders" across five states.

Shannopin Mining Co. Gives Up On Plans For Sludge Disposal Site

WAYNESBURG — Shannopin Mining Co. is planning to withdraw its application for a permit to operate a sludge disposal site in Monongahela Township, Greene County officials have been notified.

Charles Duritsa, regional solid waste manager for the Department of Environmental Resources, said that he received a telephone call from a company official who said they have abandoned plans for the project and will confirm by letter withdrawal of the application for a DER permit.

The same information had been provided earlier by County Commissioner L.R. Santore, state Sen. Barry Stout and Rep. H. William DeWeese, all of whom had expressed their opposition to granting of the permit.

Shannopin, which operates a coal mine at Bobtown, uses the site near Poland Mines for the disposal of fly ash. They had applied for the permit to expand use of the site to accept 300 tons of filtercake daily, six days a week, under a long-term contract with ALCOSAN (Allegheny County Sanitation Authority).

Filtercake, heavily limed and dried refuse from the sewage treatment process, is considered to be non-hazardous and non-toxic. The plan called for its transportation from the ALCOSAN treatment plant near Pittsburgh by Monongahela River Barge to an offloading point near Poland Mines, from where it would have been trucked to the disposal site for burial.

The plan had generated heavy opposition from residents and officials in Monongahela Township on the grounds of a potential odor problem and the threat of pollution of springs and streams.

Duritsa said that Shannopin's decision to abandon the plan probably resulted both from the public opposition and from the expense which would have been involved to make the site acceptable as a sludge dump.

He said the application made no provision for placing of a clay or synthetic liner in the dump, or for other engineering work the DER would have required before granting a permit to avoid the problem of soil and water contamination.

He said that providing for a liner "could be a very expensive proposition which could run into millions of dollars on a large site," adding that this cost factor undoubtedly was a major consideration in the decision to abandon the plan.

Over and above the cost, the company faced an extreme public reaction which Michael Forbeck, acting chief of DER facilities in Pittsburgh, said had produced as many as 50 letters a day in opposition to the proposal.

Speaking about municipal waste permits in general, Forbeck said that permits can be denied if the social value is higher than the economic justification.

State Paying 4 Communities For Taking Roads

WAYNESBURG — Four Greene County municipalities will share in more than $2 million currently being distributed by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation under the state's road turnback program.

Perry and Jackson townships will each receive $6,900; Perry Township will get $7,700, and Greensboro Borough is in line for $200.

The 277 state municipalities will receive a total of $2,532,100 from the Motor License Fund for their voluntary participation in the program to transfer low-use roads from the state to municipal jurisdiction.

Payments amount to $2,500 per mile for maintenance of roads which the local municipalities have taken over. State legislation provides for the annual payment beginning the first full year after a road has been restored to good condition and voluntarily accepted by a municipality.

The four local municipalities are the only ones in Greene County which have taken advantage of the program. The program invites townships and boroughs to take over the maintenance of roads which serve only local functions. By adding them to their road system, they receive the special subsidy in addition to the regular allotments from the state gasoline tax fund.

Driver Gets Jail Term For Fatal Crash

WAYNESBURG — The driver of a car in which two people were killed last year received a 1- to 3-year jail term in Greene County Court.

The sentence was imposed on David E. Barth Sr., 41, Graysville R.D.1, who pleaded guilty on March 7 to charges of homicide by vehicle and driving while intoxicated.

The accident claimed the lives of Barth's son, Mark C. Barth, 21, Graysville, and the son's brother-in-law, Timothy V. Reynolds, 22, Jefferson. They were riding in Barth's car when it struck a concrete bridge abutment in Graysville on Oct. 2, 1984.

Barth's attorney, Robert N. Clarke, asked the court to consider a sentence which would permit his client to serve evenings or weekends so that he could continue to support his family. He also pointed out that Barth is still undergoing treatment at West Virginia University Hospital for injuries he suffered in the accident.

"This is the type of case that no one gets anything out of," he said. "The punishment which Mr. Barth has already experienced is the only punishment that really counts."

Toothman, however, stipulated that he serve the sentence at the Greene County jail on a full-time basis. He indicated he would consider a request for work release privileges at the end of two months.

In another case, David Paul Rush, 26, of 171 North Porter Street, Waynesburg, pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated. He was fined $300, given a suspended 4- to 12-month jail sentence and placed on probation for 12 months.

Would Raise Tax Ceiling

County Pushing For Tax Measure

WAYNESBURG — Proposed legislation which would raise the legal ceiling on county property taxes from 20 to 25 mills is being studied.

Impetus for the legislation, which has received the endorsement of the State Association of County Commissioners and other organizations involved in county government, came from the Greene County commissioners as a means of avoiding an increase in the county's assessment ratio, which currently stands at 30 percent of market value.

Greene County currently has a 20-mill general fund tax levy, exclusive of a 1 1/4 debt reduction levy, with the need to generate more revenues to finance the 1986 budget. Commissioner L.R. Santore suggested raising the ceiling on millage as the least costly way of getting the needed funds since it avoids the expense which would be incurred if the assessment ratio were raised to increase the value of each mill of tax.

Santore said he was notified Monday that Senate Bill 588, which provides for raising the millage ceiling, has been reported from the Senate Local Government Committee.

Companion legislation has been introduced in the House of Representatives as House Bill 895, and Santore said that he plans to contact Rep. H. William DeWeese to push for its passage.

Santore said he is hoping for final action by May 30, since that is close to the deadline for the county to act on the assessment ratio if it becomes obvious that the legislation is not going to pass.

Carmichaels School Board

Band Boosters Pay For Concession Stand

CARMICHAELS — The Carmichaels Area Band Boosters presented a check recently to the district's school board for $6,000 for a new concession stand at the athletic field.

In thanking the band boosters for their contribution, Board President Edward Chess said, "This is an example of what can happen when the board and parent groups cooperate." Chess explained that the band boosters had agreed to raise the money to pay for building a new concession stand at the athletic field. When the board and the band boosters decided to work together on the project, the boosters, who raised the money through various projects, decided to apply whatever is left from building the concession stand to the cost of the recently purchased band uniforms.

Several band members modeled the new navy blue and gold uniforms for the board. President of the band boosters is Linda Rush and vice president is Martha Rush.

Following the check presentation, the board approved advertising for bids for the concession stand construction. The new building will be 16 by 20 feet and a new feature will be a second story which will house a press box and a storage room. Present plans are to complete the building before the King Coal Show opens in August.

In other business, Victor

Lapkowicz was named junior high football coach. The board had recently approved starting a junior high football program. Lapkowicz was the senior high coach in the district for more than 20 years and produced many winning teams. Gerome Bartley was chosen elementary school basketball coach.

James Clovis, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, reported that negotiations with all three district unions are progressing well. He said a very optimistic attitude exists on the part of all participants in the negotiations. A meeting was held with the teachers' union earlier this month and a meeting will be held with the custodians' association.

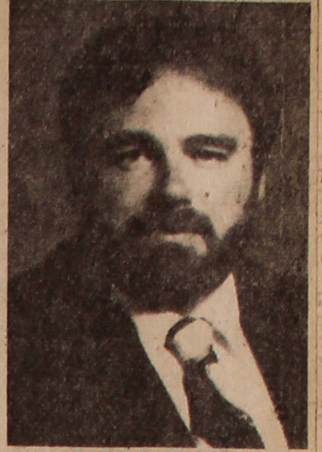

The board awarded a contract for installing outside security lighting on the junior-senior high overpass to Volchko Plumbing and Heating at a cost of $1,890. The contract for tax data processing was awarded to Infocon Corp. of Ebsenburg for $2,520 per year. The board also approved the district's health coverage and said the increase in the cost of coverage was very modest and less than they had expected.

The board approved all requests for field trips, substitute rates for the 1985-86 school year, textbook listings and school calendar.

Dr. Dolores Zoldos, district superintendent, said Aug. 22 will be the teacher's in-service day and school will start on Aug. 26. A new national holiday will be observed on Jan. 20 for Martin Luther King Day and snow days will be Feb. 17 and part of the Easter holiday, if necessary. The last day of school will be June 4 and graduation is scheduled for June 6.

Nemacolin Elementary School Principal Stan Ferek announced that elementary students will put on a musical production, called "Freedoms Bound," May 2. He said the musical tells the story of immigrant workers in America. Sets for the production were made by the parents' council. Ferek said arrangements are being made to record the production and albums will be sold if enough orders for them are received.

Aid Offered To Needy For Housing

JEFFERSON — Greene County Habitat for Humanity is currently accepting applications from needy county residents interested in home ownership.

Following months of preparation, the new Christian organization is in a position to begin its mission of providing adequate housing for families in its area, said Doris Barno of Jefferson.

"Houses will be built or renovated with money and labor donated by people who are concerned about the conditions in which their neighbors live," she said. They then become the property of the purchaser under terms of a no-profit, no-interest mortgage.

Since the number of recipients of Habitat housing will be limited to the availability of funds, land and building material, specific criteria has been drawn up to determine families with the greatest need who meet the requirements. Only applicants who do not qualify for home loans through banks or other lending institutions will be considered.

Application forms for consideration under the program are available at the Community Action office, 202 Old County Office Building, East High Street, Waynesburg. Applicants can call the office at 852-2893 and have an application mailed to them.

Completed application forms must be submitted by May 31 to Greene County Habitat for Humanity, Box 126, Jefferson, Pa., 15344. How To Rid Fruit Trees Of Pests

Homeowners should be checking ornamentals and fruit trees for a number of insect pests.

The most obvious intruder is the eastern tent caterpillars which are forming webs in the crotches of trees. These insects can be controlled easily in smaller shrubbery by removing the webs in the evening and destroying them.

Do not try to burn webs in trees. This will result in more injury than is caused by the insect feeding. Use caution when spraying trees during bloom. Many insecticides commonly used such as Sevin are toxic to honey bees and may also chemically thin fruit trees.

Rosey apple aphid and green apple aphid are found on the undersides of new growth and on actively growing terminals. If uncontrolled, they can deform growth and fruit. General fruit sprays or Diazinon will give good control.

Locust leaf minor adults have been seen. They are orange and black, approximately one-quarter-inch long and skeletonize leaves much the same as Japanese beetles. Sevin application to non-blooming shrubbery will give good control.

COLOR IN THE SHADE?

It's well known that most garden plants do better in as much sunlight as possible. However, every property has some shaded spots that can present a challenge to the gardener.

farm / home notes

by William C. Brown

Greene County Cooperative Extension Agent

To grow plants in the shade, it's important to determine the type of shade at hand. Not all shade is the same and there are varying degrees that influence plant growth.

Light shade or filtered shade is often found under the spread of tree canopies where the full force of the sun is broken. Partial shade may be in an eastern or western exposure where the sun is available during parts of the day. Deep shade is found under the overhang of a building where no sunlight falls and total light is restricted. Finally, open shade might be on the north side of a wall or building which is open to the sky, but away from direct sunlight.

The most difficult natural shade site can be found under the spread of a shallow rooted tree, like a Norway maple. Under such conditions, light doesn't limit growth as much as the moisture competition from surrounding tree roots. If you are just starting a garden in the shade, avoid setting plants directly under trees.

Impatiens are probably the most popular shade-tolerant annual for the garden. They offer bright colors and continuous summer-to-fall bloom. Impatiens are easy to maintain and they fit into a number of garden situations, from beds to tubs to hanging baskets.

Impatiens varieties to look for include the compact and uniform "Super Elfins" and "Bright Eyes." Varieties are available to meet most colors and growth requirements.

Begonias offer interesting flowers and foliage for the shaded garden. Many tuberous-rooted begonias produce beautiful double or semi-double blooms that resemble open roses. Some well-known names include the attractive "Nonstop" series and the "Clips Mixture," a colorful selection of white, yellow, orange and scarlet blooms.

Salvia, or scarlet sage, is another colorful group to consider for partial shade or full sun. These plants provide the gardener with some of the brightest reds and scarlets in the world of annuals. The "Carbinere" series contains scarlet, orange, blue and white types that are effective in mixed plantings.

Coleus do well in any degree of shade. They are available in many foliage colors, shapes and sizes. Leaf color can be solid or variegated for extra interest. Flowers are small and of little interest when compared to coleus' leaf quality.

Other shade-tolerant annuals to look for include nicotiana, primula, viola, browillia, lobelia and forget-me-not. Any or all of these will add seasonal color to areas where most other annuals fail.

When growing in the shade remember that:

✓ The best shade is a moist, partially shaded spot, either with light leaf cover or a few hours of afternoon or morning shade.

✓ The deeper the shade the taller the plants will grow.

✓ In deep shade under trees you will need extra moisture. Drip irrigation or a similarly regulated supply are popular ways to conserve water while meeting plant needs. Raised beds, underlaid with plastic, will also add color in the shade.

✓ Late afternoon and evening sun is harder on plants than morning sun followed by shade the rest of the day. Full morning sun followed by a period of shade is best for these plants.

✓ Dappled shade from sunlight filtered through high tree branches is very effective for most shade-tolerant plants.

✓ Plantings on the south and west side of a building will generally receive too much sun and heat.

Agency On Aging To Hear Comments On Services

WAYNESBURG — The Southwestern Pennsylvania Area Agency on Aging Advisory Councils will conduct four public hearings this spring to receive oral and written comments on the agency's 1985-86 Proposed Service Plan.

The hearing for Greene County will be held at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 7, in the county commissioners' meeting room in the County Office Building, Waynesburg.

An AAA spokesman said that information received at the hearings will be used in the administration of an areawide plan for continuing services in 1986. "Although the basic three-year plan for aging services was prepared in 1983, an updated version is needed each year to better meet the changing needs of the elderly throughout the planning and service area," she said.

The proposed plan has been prepared by the Proposal Review Committee, made up of AAA and Nutrition Advisory Council representatives, working closely with staff and subcontractors.

"The committee welcomes com-sumer suggestions at the hearings because it believes meaningful planning must include participation by the older residents of Fayette, Greene, Washington and the Mon Valley portion of Westmoreland County who receive AAA services," the spokesman said. "By conducting a public hearing in each of the districts, the councils are assuring the elderly every opportunity to respond to the plan."

Following the public hearings, appropriate final revisions will be made and the plan will be reviewed for approval by both AAA Advisory Councils before being submitted to the Pennsylvania Department of Aging.

Although the AAA is involved in research, planning, program development, coordination and funding of programs, most direct services are subcontracted through local provider agencies and are monitored by the AAA.

Anyone with questions about the public hearings can contact the Greene County AAA district office, located in the County Office Building at Waynesburg — call 852-1510 or toll-free 800-342-8980, extension 415.

At Dilworth, Robena Mines

Laid-Off Miners Given Better Chance At Work

The recent settlement of an arbitration ruling could lead to more jobs for laid-off union employees at the Dilworth and Robena mines. This decision permits workers to "panel" into mines owned by the U.S. Steel Corp. as well as those owned by Consolidation Coal Co.

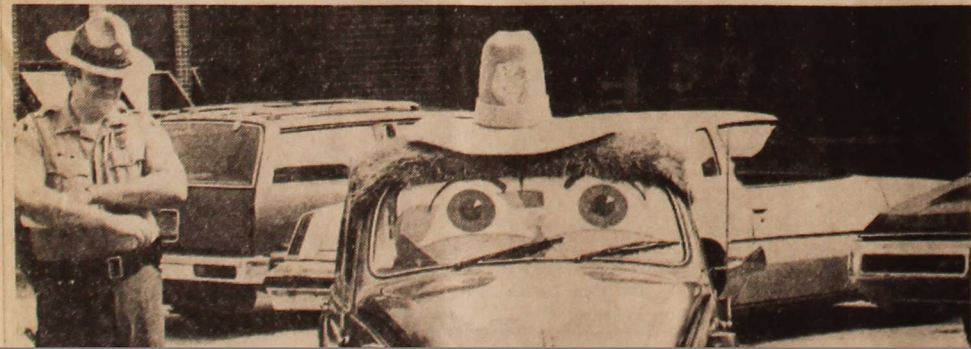

The paneling provision in the union contract gives laid-off union employees the right to be hired for jobs that open at other mines the company owns in that district or in neighboring districts.

"We feel this is a landmark decision; one of the very first to give UMW workers panel rights to two companies," said Don Albani, an executive board member with District 4 will now have the opportunity to panel into U.S. Steel's Cumberland Mine in District 4 or Maple Creek Mine in District 5, said Albani. They also will be able to panel into Consol Mines in districts 4 and either 5 or 31.

"We stopped U.S. Steel from going outside the district to hire people," said Albani. "They said once they sold the mine they sold the panel. We said the owners do have a responsibility" to the employees.

Albani said the arbitrator had announced his decision in January. The decision also will mean that five employees who filed grievances from Robena will receive a total of about $25,000 in back pay from U.S. Steel.

Joe Terranova's book has just come out again. It's called the "Handbook of College Football Recruiting," and it ranks the top 25 freshman classes for 1985-86.

If you're not into football, you may find it hard to believe that there are people who await these kinds of results with more anticipation than they do presidential elections. And spend more time worrying about which player is going where than about the defense budget or the steel industry.

Well, like it or not, a lot of money is riding on recruiting. And a lot of jobs depend on it. It is serious business, at least to those involved.

Or, as Terranova claims, "Coach Bobby Bowden once remarked that coaching football is like politics... you have to be smart enough to know the fundamentals of the game, but dumb enough to think it's important."

Terranova livens up this serious stuff with some of the worst jokes you've ever heard. About Texas, for instance, he says, "There were times last fall when it appeared as though the Longhorns couldn't find the goal line even with the help of an expedition from the National Geographic."

Now, to stop, uh, laughing, and get down to business. The best recruiting class in the country, he says, belongs to Florida State, and the second to Nebraska. Ugh. This is bad news.

The good news is that Pitt is No. 3, and Penn State is No. 10. "Will you look at the size of these kids?" he exclaims about Pitt linemen. The smallest is 6'3", 245 pounds, and they go on into infinity — 6'5", 265, etc. But

"the player that could provide the most immediate impact" is Washington's Brian Davis, Terranova says. "Let's hear it for the Foge," he says,

"the new PA pasta king."

He's not so kind to Happy Valley and its leader, though. "After a rather solid thumping at the hands of Notre Dame last fall," he says, "it's said that Paterno reminds his players that two buses would head for the practice field the following day. The one p.m. bus for those who needed a little extra work and the empty bus at three p.m."

And, "Last season the Nittany Lions were unable to beat their way out of a paper bag with a crowbar." But there's a ray of hope for the Nittany fans: "Things are likely to change in the near future."

Well, Penn State signed Terranova's top-rated wide receiver, Michael Timpson, of Hialeah, Florida, and top linebacker, Quintus McDonald, from New Jersey. And tailback Odell Wilson, who was voted player of the year in Massachusetts, if Massachusetts football, beyond Doug Flutie, can be said to mean anything.

Notre Dame came in 17th, and Gerry Faust came in for his share of bad jokes. "You've got to give Gerry Faust credit. If he was the bridge officer on the Titanic he probably would have been able to convince the passengers that the ship was only making a routine stop to pick up ice." Faust is up from 21st last year in the Terranova ratings, but had a long slide down from being the No. 1 recruiter in 1981.

There are a few notable absences from the 1985 list, too. It is astounding to realize suddenly that Ohio State is not even mentioned. Neither is Auburn. Nor are Purdue, Tennessee, BYU, or Washington. Terranova is not infallible, of course. Four years ago, he didn't even list Doug Flutie as a prospect.

Increased Parking Fines Could Compound Problem

A proposal by Waynesburg Borough Council to more than double the fines for parking violations as a means of keeping downtown parking spaces available for shoppers could be counterproductive.

As the Chamber of Commerce has pointed out, a study made last year indicated that one of the principal reasons people gave for not shopping in the downtown area was the lack of convenient parking, the need to "feed" meters and the fear of being ticketed.

At the present time, meter tickets cost $1 if paid on the day issued, $2 if paid within five days, and $5 thereafter. Council is considering a schedule which would leave the fine at $1 if paid at the police station within one hour, $3 on the date of issue if more than an hour has elapsed, $5 if paid within five days, and $10 thereafter.

The avowed purpose is to discourage street parking by people who work in town and to encourage them to take advantage of reasonable monthly rates available at parking lots.

There's no question that the problem exists. On any given day a lot of spaces are occupied by such cars, which doesn't say much for the thoughtfulness of the people who own them.

But while the threat of higher parking fines may give them pause, Council would do well to heed the feeling of Police Chief Tim Hawfield that it could also drive away people who come to town to shop, many of whom he says are already complaining about the cost of tickets when they get them.

Chamber of Commerce officials have offered to meet with council to discuss other ways in which the problem of employee parking could be solved. All alternatives should be explored before any action is taken to increase fines.

Pumpkin Run Resident Calls For Government Action On Bad Roads

For those who are staying informed on events of the Pumpkin Run Plan road crisis, which has received much attention lately from newspapers and television, developments can be simply described, and rightfully so, as un-American at best.

What level of government could contend that a house fire, heart attack, traumatic injury or any kind is not an excuse for them to become involved?

When something unjust is government is done "over the board" does that make it legal and just? We pay taxes to government while that same government accepts (or rather demands) our taxes and then blames a developer for wrongdoing — and the total void of any form of government goes on and on and on waiting for something to happen!

If a tragedy should occur, would a responsible government then shrug its shoulders in dismay?

When a government whose primary function and responsibility is to protect its people above all else becomes completely non-existent because of spending its energies pointing its finger of authority toward a developer then there's something seriously wrong and tragic.

We are told that if we pay X amount of dollars we can have a passable road and government. I believe that an over-the-board pay-off in order to have government can only be termed as "sick!"

Township supervisors wanting security in the form of cash or liens on private property until their road is paid for sounds very strange. In the past they've denied us physical security unconditionally; now they want security for themselves in the form of dollars and cents.

As an unemployed veteran am I forced to accept living in a world void of government protection which is the basic right of every American citizen?

While the Vietnam War was well under way I volunteered for the Army's Airborne Infantry which of course meant going to Vietnam and combat duty. I knew very well at that time that returning as whole as I left was next to nil, if I returned at all.

In May of 1968 while fighting with the 101st Airborne Division as a paratrooper I was severely wounded in the left lung and chest. So now you can understand why I say that the "cost" of government could never in any veteran's eyes be a "pay for or pay the consequences" because the price has been paid — well paid.

The bottom line is that paying in order to have basic government protection is immoral because the price has already been paid, and being denied government speaks for itself!

Discord In County A Rerun?

There seems to be brewing a rerun of attacking a county commissioner for having an idea or proposal different than that of the two other commissioners who are backed by certain special interests. Sixteen or 17 years ago this very thing took place with the press and others personally attacking the lone commissioner for not keeping in line with the established idea.

This country was established with a Constitution that guaranteed freedom of expression, freedom of speech, freedom to think as we feel. All over the country it has become a far cry from guaranteeing these constitutional rights. All you have to do is watch the news on TV and read various newspapers throughout the country.

The tragic part is the individual who is attacked is the one who is usually right. So to detract from this fact he is made a mess in the eyes of the reader and, of course, the writer.

Differences of opinion are healthy, particularly when it comes to government functions. Every individual should have the same right to express them and to back what he believes in and not face destruction from the press or others.

WAYNESBURG — All five candidates for Greene County judge spoke during a Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce dinner meeting held Wednesday, April 24, at the Waynesburg Elks.

Each candidate was given five minutes to address the audience and each responded to specific questions from the audience following their opening remarks.

Taking part were William Thomas, C. Robert McCall, Terry Grimes, Charles Morris and William Nalitz. Thomas, Grimes and Nalitz have cross filed and are candidates on both the Democratic and Republican ballots. McCall and Morris are running on the Democratic ballot only.

The first question from the floor following the candidates' statements of qualifications concerned the process of plea bargaining. Each candidate agreed it was an essential part of the judicial process but differed on how it should be applied.

Thomas said plea bargaining has its place and noted the court has the final determination if such an agreement is reached.

Grimes said the primary objective is to see that justice is served and each case should be decided on the evidence presented. Morris noted the process was necessary because without plea bargaining, the court would be overloaded with cases. He said more than 300 cases come into court each year and it would be impossible to handle that many with separate trials. Nalitz, on the other hand, called much of the plea bargaining an "absolute abomination," and added the system must be administered fairly for all concerned.

The second questioned the possibility of the county needed an additional judge at this time or in the near future.

All five candidates took note of the economic situation in the county and doubted if the county could afford the necessary added expenses involved.

Morris said the county has reached the limit in the number of cases one judge can handle but doubted if there was enough of a case load to warrant...

latitude allowed a judge in handing down a sentence.

Morris said the court is restricted to act within guide lines established by the appellate courts but noted the local court has the reputation of being "tough" with criminals. He added that it would be a mistake to "lock" yourself into a specific sentencing policy.

Nalitz noted the higher courts have taken away much of the local power although such power is needed to deal with local situations. He cited the difference in rural and urban problem areas and need to deal with current situations in each.

Thomas said each case must be determined on its own merit noting that no two cases are ever the same. McCall said he would be on the "firm side" when it came to sentencing noting that rehabilitation is a worthy goal but deterrents are just as worthy. Grimes said a sentence should reflect the local issues and a judge has the duty to attempt such sentencing.

The final question concerned re-

County Gives OK To Information Office For Human Services

WAYNESBURG — Establishment of a Human Services Information and Referral office was authorized by the Greene County commissioners at their weekly meeting Thursday, April 25.

The office, using federal money made available to the county by the state Department of Welfare, will be set up by the Washington-Greene Community Action Corp. to provide county residents with a readily available source of information on where to go for help in solving any human service problems they might have.

CAC Director John Wilson and Assistant Director Joan Owens said a study made during the past year indicates that many elderly and needy persons who need assistance often fail to get it because they don't know where to turn for the help.

They said the new I&R office, which will be staffed by a professional, will provide these people "with a place they can contact, (a person with whom they can) discuss their problem, and be referred to the appropriate federal, state, county or private human service agency for assistance."

Development costs for the I&R system are estimated to range between $8,914 and $9,866. Annual operating costs will range between $22,355 and $26,498.

Funding for the system will come from the Human Services Development Fund, which will be combined with the Adult Services Block Grant for 1985-86 to provide the county with $88,478.

Setup costs will come from money remaining in the $30,000 Human Services Block grant for 1984-85, part of which was used to fund the study by consultant Jim Stark on the county's social service needs.

Wilson said that the new office will be established in Community Action headquarters in Waynesburg and will be provided with a toll-free telephone number so that any county resident can call without charge. A person with a master's degree in social services will be employed to staff the office, which CAC hopes to have in place within the next month.

The commissioners also authorized continuation for another year of the four Assistance Centers for the Unemployed which are operated in Greene County by the Washington-Greene Human Services Commission using money from the Adult Services Block Grant. The 1985-86 funding of $50,000 to operate the centers will come from the combined funding of $88,478.

In other action at the meeting, the commissioners adopted a resolution to be sent to U.S. Sens. John Heinz and Arlen Specter opposing any cuts in the Community Services Block Grant, which provides basic funding for operation of the Community Action program.

Commissioner L.R. Santore was appointed Greene County representative on a new Southwestern Pennsylvania Human Services, Inc., being set up by the Mon Valley Health and Welfare Council.

Betty Morris and Ruth Mitchell, director and deputy director of the Greene County Tax Claim Bureau, met with the commissioners to request permission to hire additional people to assist with the task of entering 1984 delinquent taxes into the county computer. They said that until the job has been completed the agency will be unable to accept any delinquent property tax payments from county residents.

The commissioners agreed to consider the request, but suggested assigning other county employees to the office on a temporary basis as an alternative to hiring additional people.

Two proclamations were adopted, one designating May 1 as Law Day and the other designating April 27 as Keep Pennsylvania Beautiful Day as part of PennDOT's campaign to clean up state highways.
