Youngster Cast In Valiant Attempt To Play Baseball

Special To The O-R

CARMICHAELS — We are not suggesting he is a candidate for baseball's Hall of Fame yet - but if desire, drive and character are among the qualifications, then Kane Mitchell certainly is off to a head start for induction

Kane is a 10-year-old Little Leaguer from Carmichaels playing on the First National Bank team in the Carmichaels King Coal Little League

Out of the more than 90 players in the league this summer, he is the only one put ing his uniform on over a fiber-glass cast which protects two broken bones in his right arm.

His mother Pam was digging holes in the backyard to plant Forsythia and Kane managed to fall into one of the holes and broke his right arm in two places. Rushed to the emergency room where rays, permanent damage and possible trauma, Kane kept asking his mother if he would have to turn in his

Not only did he not turn in his uniform, but with his arm in the cast he showed up at the Carmichaels Area Elementary Track and Field Day and took two firsts in the obstacle course run and the broad jump.

His Little League manager Jim Diamond says, "I think I would play the boy with two broken arms. While we want to win, the example Kane sets can't help but inspire the whole team. Even when he couldn't play he never missed a practice and was able to coach third base when he couldn't take the Kane's enthusiasm for the game is shared by the whole family. His mother says she dreams of winning the lottery just to buy her own team.

Waynesburg Girl Drowns

May 31, while playing in a flooded field behind her home in the Blairtown section of Waynesburg.

Brenda Lea Fox, a daughter of Donna Phillips Fox of Waynesburg R.D.3 and James W. Fox Sr. of Ohio, died when she was pulled into a drainage pipe.

She was reported missing at 5:40 p.m. and her body was recovered at 7:20 p.m. in Smith Creek which runs behind her home.

According to County Deputy Coroner Charles Behm, the girl and her 8year-old brother, Terry, were playing in the water that flooded the field behind the house when Smith Creek overflowed its banks early Friday morning.

Behm said the girl apparently was pulled into a 23-inch pipe that was flooded field all day.

draining the water from the field into the stream.

Members of the Waynesburg Volunter Fire Department searched the flooded field where water was as much as four feet deep. The Rices Landing Water Rescue Team was called to assist in the search.

A neighbor, Jean Zimmerman, said children had been playing in the derstorms late Thursday, May 30, and early Friday dumped at least 2.5 inches of rain on Greene County Several roads were flooded and in the western part of the county drivers were forced to find alternate routes. An impassable road also forced the West Greene School District to dismiss classes early.

The lightning that accompanied the storm also knocked out the county communications system as well as power to a number of homes.

A number of roads, mainly in the western part of the county, were closed due to flooding, said Chris Sleighter, assistant manager with the state Department of Transportation in Greene County. Route 21 at Ryerson, Route 18 at Golden Oaks Park and several back roads located next to streams were flooded, Sleighter said.

A few roads in the western end of the county were also closed because of mud slides, but Sleighter said they had been cleared by PennDOT crews by early Friday afternoon

The West Greene School District dismissed students at about 10 a.m., because faculty members and several school buses were unable to cross Route 18 at Golden Oaks Park, according to district superintendent Paul Polink

A stream near the school also overflowed its banks and covered the football field with at least three feet of water, he said.

Flooding was reported along Route 30027, South Branch Muddy Creek, and Route 30061 near Route 88.

Firefighters from the Bobtown Volunteer Fire Department were called out at about 2:10 a.m. when lightning struck the antenna on a house on North Moreland Street in Bobtown.

Bobtown Fire Chief Pete Novak said the lightning burned a board that was 0Bvcdamage by dosing the smouldering wood with a bucket of water. The home is owned by Stanley

The winds and lightning also downed power lines. Bob Rokicki of West Penn Power said a 24,000-volt line feeding the Greensboro area was struck by lightning leaving 2,454 cus-tomers in Greensboro and Newtown without electricity from 5:20 a.m. to 6:30 a.m.

Rokiki said there were also power outages scattered throughout the county that affected fewer customers.

Lightning also knocked out county communications affecting the fire, police and maintenance communications systems. The fire base was reported back in operation Friday evening, but the police and maintenance systems were still out.

According to the National Weather Service, the heaviest rainfall in southwestern Pennsylvania fell in Point Marion, where 2.75 inches fell be-tween 9 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m.

Sam McCullough, at the Franklin Township Sewage Treatment Plant, reported that 2.5 inches of rain fell between 10:30 p.m. Thurdasy and 7 a.m. Friday

Reed Named Chancellor

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg native Charles B. Reed has been appointed chancellor of the Florida State University System.

More than 50 applications and nominations for the post were reviewed, with eight candidates being interviewed. Reed was the unanimous choice of the 13 regents who guide the nine state universities.

He is a graduate of Waynesburg High School and George Washington University, where he received his master's degree and doctorate in

He is a son of Mrs. Elizabeth Reed of Mechanicsburg and the late Samuel R. Reed and is married to the former Cathy Sayers, daughter of Mrs. Jane Sayers of Waynesburg and the late Albert A. Sayers. He, his wife and their two children, Charles Jr. and Susan, reside in Tallahassee, Fla.

Since moving to Florida 14 years ago, Reed has held various positions with the state Department of Educa-tion. Six years ago he joined the staff of Florida Gov. Bob Graham as his liaison with the Department of Education, and for the past year has been Graham's chief of staff.

As the new chancellor, Reed said he "is intrigued by the opportunity to guide the nine state universities as they help shape Florida's future."

Old Machine Shop Has Smell Of History

AYNESBURG - To step into the old W.A. Young & Sons Foundry and Ma-chine Shop at Rices Landng is to step back into a time when Greene County coal mines employed thousands of men more than they do now, when packet boats still plied the Monongahela River on a regular basis, and tracks on the railroad spur and not rust-coated relics of a bygone

"It definitely has the smell of history about it," said Farley Toothman, president of the Greene County Historical Society, referring to the pungent aroma of oil and grease which still lingers from the more than half century during which the shop served the industrial might of the Preservation of the building and its equipment was uppermost in the mindsof the society's board of directors when they voted unanimously earlier this year to buy the two-story river-front building. The sale was completed this week with recording of a deed for the property, which was purchased for $37,000 from Mr. and Mrs. James Hathaway of Carmichaels. They had bought the structure veral years ago from the Young

For Toothman, it is part of a a planned program to make the His-torical Society "a truly countywide organization dedicated to the preser-vation of buildings and landmarks which have historical significance." He pointed out that the present 25-member board of directors has representatives from all sections of the county. And while major interest will continue to be focused on the society's Waynesburg museum and its further development, other sections of the county and "spinoff" activities will not be overlooked.

"To be effective the society has to be aggressive in pursuing its goals," Toothman said. "Once a historical building has been torn down, it can

An antique car club is already functioning as an arm of the society; plans are under way for organization of a railroad buffs group centering on the old narrow-gauge engine and other equipment housed at the museum, and construction of a building on museum grounds is about to begin to house equipment now located in the Donald Stewart Machine Shop in Waynesburg.

The society also has its eye on the old Waynesburg and Washington Railroad terminal building on First Street as another possible restoration

Toothman agrees they are major goals, but he views them as realistic. He also noted that the society's financial position has improved through bequests from several people, the most recent of which was a $10,000 gift left in the will of Barbara Williamson Levin of Chester County, a Waynesburg resident who Acquisition of the Young foundry and machine shop represents the first property the society has owned, since the museum property is held under a long-term lease from the Greene County commissioners.

"In its early years the society (it was founded in 1925) was concerned with acquisition of artifacts centering on county history. When the com-missioners turned over the former county home for a museum in 1969, it gave the society a suitable place to house those articles. Now that the museum is in place, it's time to move on to other things."

George Kelley of Waynesburg, an active member of the board of directors, has assumed responsibility for the machine shop and is already involved in cleaning it up so that it can be open to the public, hopefully by sometime this summer.

"It isn't a question of restoration beyond fixing some windows and doing other minor work, it's a matter of getting the place cleaned up and the machines back in running order so far as possible," Kelley said.

The business was opened by William A. Young around the turn of the century and for many years serviced equipment from the nearby Crucible mine, which was one of the first major mines in the county. Wheels for mine cars and other mining equipment were made in the shop, as was equipment for steamboats and the

The foundry part of the shop was closed in 1938 and the machine shop continued to operate until the 1960s, although the Crucible mine was closed in the 1950s and other industrial business fell off sharply.

The amazing thing to Kelley is the way the shop has survived relatively undisturbed.

"There are still hand tools here which must have been made in the shop shortly after it opened," he said.
Among equipment on the first floor, where the foundry was located, are the first screw-cutting blade in this part of the country; a wood-burning stove which appears to have been cast in the shop; metal lathes; drill presses; a complete forge, mil-ling machines, and many other large machines. They are driven by leather belts which run from a large electric Orginally, Kelley said, the shop used steam power. It was later operated by a gas-powered motor before the electric motor was installed.

"It still looks about the way it must have looked in the 1920s," Kelley said.

"Someday I would like to replace the electric motor with a gas motor."

The second floor is given over primarily to wood-working tools and machines which were used in making the dies from which the metal parts

"Mr. Young was a master cabinet-maker and making dies is the top of the cabinetmaking art," he said.

The parts shop and office are also on the second floor, complete with advertising signs from the 1920s, one of them with the picture of a girl in a bathing suit from the flapper era.

"It's a wonderful place for anyone who likes machinery as I do," Kelley

West Greene Board Limits Access To Personnel Files

ROGERSVILLE - The West Greene School Board at a special meeting recently approved several resolutions aimed at clarifying policy. It voted to restrict access to personnel files, directed the administration to prepare a manual on the district's operating policies and established a rule on the number of days board members are to be notified before meetings

The resolutions were presented by board member Arden Melzer and were not included on the meeting's agenda. Melzer said after the meeting that the resolutions were meant to take care of various procedural matters so the board could deal more with

The resolution concerning access the resolution concerning access to personnel files called for keeping all such files in a central location.

Access to the files would be only with an administrator's approval. The names of anyone who looks through a file also will be included with material in the file.

There have been concerns ex-ssed ... that there have been violations of personnel files," he said. He added that he didn't know if there was any truth to what he had heard, but he hoped the rule would end such talk.

The board also approved a resolu-tion requesting that the administration prepare a manual of all operating policy and procedures. According to the motion, the board would then review the manual and adopt any changes by October.

In addition, the board voted that each member be notified in writing at least seven days before any board or committee meeting. Earlier in the meeting, one board member had said hé had not been informed about a meeting at which candidates for the position of cafeteria supervisor were

The board also approved the 1985-86 Greene County Vocational-Technical budget, which lists the disthat the district would have to pay

$9,685 more than what was reported in the Vo-Tech's tentative budget.

Board President Dan Morris said he had attended the Vo-Tech budget meetings and the budget had been reviewed very carefully. One of the reasons the district's share had increased was that the Southeastern Greene School District had decided to send fewer students.

Ron Lohr, John Berdine, Dan Morris and Marie Carter voted for the motion and Glen Kennedy and Roy Barnhart voted against it. Melzer abstained and Rick Barnhart and Anne Bower were absent. The motion had to be approved by five members, a majority. Solicitor C. Robert McCall said in these cases the abstention would go with the majority vote.
In other business, the board:

Voted to advertise for a business manager, a position it had de-cided to create at an earlier meeting. Voted to hire the firm of McCall and Stets as district solicitor.

Failed to approve a motion granting reimbursement, totaling $90, to three employees who attended a computer literacy workshop on the unds that the employees faile follow the correct procedure in requesting payment.

Voted to remodel the business offices to include another office there at a cost not to exceed $1,000.

Pinkeye Is Seasonal Problem Pinkeye season is almost upon us again. This year looks a little more positive than past years in terms of controlling this disease of cattle.

Pinkeye is caused by a bacterium called Moraxella bovis, which is con-stantly present in your herd. Some form of eye irritation is necessary to get the disease started. Dust, pollen, wind and sunlight are irritations you can't control. Flies and grass and weed stems can be con-trolled to a certain degree. Clip grown-up pastures as early in the summer as possible. Insecticide impregnated ear tags are helpful with horn and face fly control.

The pesticide works to the surface of the tag and is brushed on the hair about the face and neck of the cow. Recently, several research projects have shown a decrease in effectiveness of the tag due to resistance buildup in the fly population. The current theory is that less and less insecticide is available from the tag as the summer passes and the lower dosage aids the resistance buildup.

Faceflies are the primary vector for pinkeye. A vet, working in an area been noted, states that the tags are still killing 65 to 70 percent of the faceflies, which makes them worth-while. Manufacturers are working with various materials and methods of recharging ear tags that may ov ercome the resistance problem in the

Another encouraging development is a vaccine that appears to be effective against pinkeye. Jim Corins, manager of Stornoway Farms in Westmoreland County, told me re-cently that they used the vaccine on a little over 200 head of cattle last year They had only one case of pinkeye and that was on a calf that he felt had been vaccinated too late in the season.

At least two companies have deinclude the pinkeye material. They both have two types, one combined with lepto, vibriosis and Haemophilus somnus materials: the other with blackleg material. Check with your veterinarian about these vaccines.

One quick note on blackleg. Re-cently a herd lost some older cows to this disease. This was unique to me because I thought once cattle were over 18-24 months old they were not susceptible to blackleg.

Dr. Drake, Penn State vet, tells me this is not the case. They need the calfhood vaccination against the disease to be immune. Calfhood vaccination against blackleg in this county is

Historical Society Taking Exciting New Directions

Local history buffs in Greene County have to be excited by new directions being taken by the county Historical Society.

After years of focusing attention on development of its museum at Waynesburg, the society has begun an active effort to broaden its base to include all sections of the county, with emphasis on preservation of buildings and landmarks which have significance not only for the pioneer period of the late 18th century and early 19 century, but also for the development which followed as the county entered the industrial age.

The campaign to preserve and restore the Crouse one-room school in what is now the West Greene School District as a memorial to the early days of public education, and acquisition of the old W.A. Young & Sons Foundry and Machine Shop at Rices Landing as a relic of the first period of the county's coal industry, are positive steps in this direction.

Negotiations under way with Conrail to aquire the old Waynesburg and Washington Railway station at Waynesburg along with two miles of right-of-way hold intriguing prospects for railroad buffs, while organization in 1983 of an antique and classic car club, which holds regular events, shows and meetings, already has an active membership of more than 80

The society is also remodeling the old boiler house building at the museum to house the society's genealogical library which is being reorganized by Alvah Headlee of Morgantown, W.Va., and will soon begin construction of a new building to house equipment and machinery from the Donald Stewart Machine Shop at Waynesburg.

In addition to the Fall Festival, which has become a major attraction, the society this year will again host a dollhouse show in September and a Christmas show in December, as well as a number of other special events.

With a board of directors representative of all geographical sections of the county, the Greene County Historial Society is building solidly on the years of effort which went into establishment of one of the best community museums in the area and is well on its way toward becoming a vital force in the life of the

Guest Saxophonist Plays Farewell Gig

By Christie Molzon, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Affiliate Artist Laura Hunter, a saxophonist who has toured extensively in this country and Europe, completed her two-week stay in the area with a final public per-formance in the Bowlby Public Library. She performed both classical and contemporary pieces and talked about her career.

Ms. Hunter started playing the clarinet while in the fifth grade and the year after, "because I was the biggest kid in the class," she was given the chance to play the alto sax.

She continued with the instrument during high school but admitted at the time her interest in it wasn't great. "I wasn't really a child prodigy, mostly it was a social outlet," she said.

She did have many good things to say about the public school system where bands and orchestras are part of the curriculum. "Very shy kids can put energy into band, make the first chair, and gain status that way," she said. "It's something they can do that does not count on beauty, intellect or brute strength, but on how much they are willing to work.

Ms. Hunter grew up in Ann Arbor, Mich., and later attended the Interlochen Arts Academy. The academy was founded in the 1880s and its eight-week summer program introduced her to classical music and sparked a growing interest in the Later, while attending college, she learned that there is little classical music available for saxophone players. Most of the music written specifically for the instrument has been done in the last century. Another thing she learned is that a saxophone player must learn to play all the saxophones, the flute, clarinet, bassoon and oboe. "I was the woodwind department at my first job," she explained.

In addition to her first teaching job at Texas Southern University, she has taught at Rice University, Hillside College and the National Music

She also attended the Con-servatory of Music in Bordeaux, France, and received her B.M. and M.M. degrees from the University of Michigan. She joined Affiliate Artists Inc. last year.

Ms. Hunter currently lives in San Diego and teaches at the University of San Diego and the University of Redlands. She practices about four hours a day and last year spent $500 on reeds for her instruments.

Her stay in Greene County was sponsored by the Greene County Council on the Arts and U.S. Steel.

Bad Tooth Is Ticket To Florida

WAYNESBURG - Dentist Ingrid Schmidt's search for just the right cavity ended Thursday afternoon, May 30, when a local woman showed up at her office with a bad molar.

Dr. Schmidt had one day left to find a nation to accompany her to find a patient to accompany her to Florida where she would be taking her dental board exams. A story which ran on the front page of Thurswhich ran on the front page of Thursday's Observer-Reporter reported that she needed a patient with a cavity on a back tooth where no previous fillings had been.

Her efforts all week to find the right tooth had been in vain. But on Thursday Carol Dorsey of Graysville came up with the winning cavity.

The newspaper article generated numerous phone calls and many more people stopped in to have X-rays taken to see if they would qualify. Dr. Schmidt was offering a paid flight as well as free meals and lodging to the person with the bad tooth.

"It's been crazy," Dr. Schmidt said when contacted by phone at her office Thursday evening. "It was all I could do to keep up with my scheduled patients and then a toothache walked in and that set us back awhile.

in and that set us back awhite.

"I did have one call from the South
Hills area and he said he was coming down, but he hasn't shown up as yet. She planned to keep her office open

In addition to the area people who called hoping their teeth would make them eligible for the Florida trip, others offered her phone numbers of people living in that state.

"The phone was ringing all day, but it was fun. And I heard all kinds of tooth stories. One man said he had a tooth that looked like Mount St

"It's worked out perfectly," Dr. Schmidt said. "She's thanking me for the opportunity to go and I'm thanking her."

Greensboro Mayorality A 'Family Affair'

GREENSBORO — Residents of Greensboro apparently regard their mayorality as a Drew family affair.

At the primary on May 21 Demo-cratic voters gave 16 write-in votes to former mayor Keith E. Drew, 16 to his son and present mayor, Keith A. Drew, and four votes to another son, Keith Drew.

There was no candidate on the ballot because the younger Keith Drew, who is an industrial engineer at Duquesne Light's Warwick Mine, didn't realize his term was up. He was appointed mayor last year after his father resigned from the position and thought the appointment was effective through 1987.

"I held the position for 14 years and it was the second time I resigned," the father said. "Keith thought he had another two years to go on the term and so he didn't file as a candidate." candidate.

But even though there was a tie for the Democratic nomination, there won't be any problem. When asked if he planned to withdraw from the race, the elder Mr. Drew said, "You'd better believe it.

Fire Destroys West Penn Post

DRY TAVERN — A fire believed to have been started by lightning Friday night, May 31, destroyed a control panel building owned by West Penn Power Co. along the Dry Tav-ern-Clarksville Road.

Volunteer firemen from Jefferson, anding and Clarksville answered the alarm at about 11 p.m.

The corrogated-metal building which measures some 20 by 25 feet, contained switchboard and relay

West Penn officials said the fire will not cause an interruption of power because the controls can be handled through another control panel in the power system.

Farmers Should Certify Grains

WAYNESBURG — William A. Cree, chairman of the Greene County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, remins farmers that June 15 is the final day to certify small grains.

July 15 is the deadline for corn and grain sorghum. After planting is finished, but before the deadline date, farmers should report their acreages.

Zero acre should also be reported. This information is important as it effects the farm history, and could be used for future farm programs. Eligibility for participation in all programs administered by ASCS is established under law without regard to race, color, sex, national origin, religion or handicap.
