New MH-MR Budget Includes Three New Programs

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Funding for three new Greene County programs are included in the 1985-86 budget of the Washington-Greene Mental Health and Mental Retardation Program which was approved by the Greene County commissioners at their weekly meeting Thursday, July 11.

Ronald Barshick, MH-MR executive director, told the commissioners that the availability of supplemental funds through federal and state programs will enable the agency to provide the services at no additional cost to county government. Greene County's share of the $8.9 million budget will remain constant at $45,000.

He explained that most of the programs are funded completely with state and federal funds. Where a 10 percent county match is required, Washington County pays 8 percent and Greene County 2 percent.

One of the new programs will involve establishment of a day care center in Carmichaels for mentally retarded preschool children, with funding from both MH-MR and Intermediate Unit I. Barshick said 23 children ranging in age from infancy to 5 years have been identified as needing the service.

"At the present time some of these children are receiving services in their homes while others are being transported to a center at Washington," Barshick said. "The new arrangement will enable us to expand our services to the children and will avoid the hardship on them of a daily trip to Washington."

The Carmichaels center will be operated by United Cerebral Palsy of Southwestern Pennsylvania.

Another new program will involve working with the Greene County Children and Youth office to establish a foster home program for emotionally disturbed children and adolescents who cannot function in their own homes. The program will be administered by Mon Valley United Health Services.

Barshick said the program is one of three pilot programs in the state designed to test the practicality of placing such young people in private foster homes, where they would receive counseling services. At the present time, he said, they are placed in privately operated group homes at a cost of $75 to $100 a day.

"We feel we will be able to provide the same service at a cost of no more than $30 a day but, because the program is experimental, we will begin slowly at first by placing just three youths in foster homes," Barshick said.

The third new program will be administered by the Greene County Association for Retarded Citizens to provide work opportunities for adult retarded individuals who are capable of handling such things as janitorial services, lawn work and similar odd jobs. It would enable GARC to provide additional accommodation for lower-functioning adults at the agency's Opportunity Center in West Waynesburg, Barshick explained.

The MH-MR administrator also said that the mental health outpatient clinic operated in Waynesburg by Centerville Clinics has outgrown its space in the Medical Arts Building adjacent to Greene County Memorial Hospital. The budget provides for acquisition of a building in the same general area which would be more suited to the clinic's needs.

During the past year, Barshick said, the clinic served more than 750 outpatient clients.

In other action at their meeting, the commissioners approved an application for Industrial Revenue Mortgage financing from a new building in Franklin Township to serve as regional headquarters for Emway Resources, Inc., owner and operator of the Emerald Mine in West Waynesburg. The headquarters is now located in Washington.

The financing, which was approved Wednesday by the Greene County Industrial Development Authority, involves a bank loan of up to $599,000 for erection of the building by David Hook of Waynesburg on Elm Drive, just off Route 21 on the road leading to Waynesburg Central High School.

In response to a question from Commissioner Dan Bailey as to why a shell building in the Paisley Industrial Park, Carmichaels, was not used for the new Emway headquarters, GCID Executive Director George K. Stennett said Emway selected the Franklin Township site because of its proximity to the mine and Interstate 79.

"If we're going to promote industrial growth in Greene County, let's spread it around," Bailey said. He pointed out that the Paisley Park shell building, which was built by GCID in the hope of attracting an industrial tenant, has been sitting empty for more than a year.

Stennett pointed out that while his agency can promote the building as an attractive site, the final decision on location rests with the company coming into the county.

He also noted that GCID has been required to cut back sharply in its promotional activities because the county cut the agency's budget by 43 percent this year.

"When we were able to advertise the Paisley building, we developed a number of prospects," Stennett said. "Now that we can't afford to advertise it, we have reduced our chances of finding a tenant."

Commissioner E.R. Santore said that the commissioners did not want to restrict GCID operations, but that reduction of the budget was necessary this year because of the county's financial position.

"It wasn't an arbitrary decision aimed at GCID," Santore said. "It was forced on us out of the necessity to reduce costs in all possible areas."

The commissioners made two appointments to the board of the Greene County Library System to replace Isaac Bell, who had served as a representative from the board of directors of Fleniken Memorial Library, Carmichaels, and Donald Berkebile, who had served as member-at-large from the Carmichaels area.

Marcia Biddle of Carmichaels was appointed as Fleniken board representative and Nancy Masuga of Carmichaels as member-at-large. Commissioner John Gardner also announced the appointment of Lola Tornabene of Waynesburg to serve as his representative on the county library board when he is unable to attend meetings.

The commissioners were notified that the Department of Welfare has approved funding for the coming fiscal year for continuation of the public transportation program operated by the Community Action Corp. While no figures were given, the announcement said that funding from the Public Assistance Transportation Block Grant for fiscal 1985-86 will be slightly higher to cover the cost of transporting partial hospitalization clients in the coming year.

The week of May 14-20 was proclaimed as MIA-POW Week in Greene County. The action was taken at the request of Bill Davison and Kyle Eddings of the local MIA-POW organization.

Cumberland Meeting Is Called Over Fire Hall

NEMACOLIN — A town meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 23, at Union Hall in Nemacolin to discuss a controversial issue dividing this Cumberland Township village.

The Nemacolin Volunteer Fire Department would like to build a new fire hall and move out of its current quarters.

This would not ordinarily be cause for controversy, but the proposed site of the new fire hall has been met with opposition.

Firemen are looking at a plot of ground that contains the community honor roll and several memorial

MT. MORRIS — A car owned by Lois J. Miller of Painsville, Ohio, was stolen from the residence of Joseph Miller in Mt. Morris. The car was later found burning along a rural road in Perry Township. The Mt. Morris Volunteer Fire Department was called at 11:45 p.m. to extinguish the blaze.

trees. The honor roll contains the names of 13 native sons who lost their lives in World War II. At dedication ceremonies, a tree was planted in memory of each veteran. Most of the trees remain standing.

Some residents feel the fire company is justified in building a new, more strategically located firehall, but others, especially older residents, feel the veterans park should remain intact.

Firemen have volunteered to move the honor roll to another site and even add the names of those who served in the Korean and Vietnam wars.

The park is under the jurisdiction of Nemacolin Incorporated, an organization of local residents who control the water and sewage systems and garbage collection. Road maintenance and other services are handled by the Cumberland Township supervisors.

The honor roll park has been renovated recently and cleared after being in disrepair from vandalism for many years.

Ambulance Services Agree With New EMS Law

By Bob Niedbala, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Organizations operating ambulances in Greene County say they are in favor of the legislation, signed into law recently by Gov. Dick Thornburgh, setting standards for ambulance services and providers of emergency medical care.

"It will really benefit our residents," said MaChelle Ream, chairman of the Greene County Emergency Medical Council. All who are served by an ambulance in an emergency will be sure to receive a high level of care.

Although many of the regulations have yet to be established, Ms. Ream said the new law should cause few problems with local service groups. Most of the organizations here already operate in compliance with the new regulations; those that do not, should have to make only a few additions to comply with them.

Ambulance services in Pennsylvania currently are not regulated, ac-ording to Ms. Ream. "Anyone could buy a vehicle, put a license on it and call themselves an ambulance service," she said.

The Comprehensive Emergency Medical Services Act will require that all ambulance services be licensed within the next two years as either a basic or advanced life support service.

To receive a license, the service group will have to carry certain life-saving equipment in the ambulances it uses on emergency calls. The minimum requirements for equipment will be determined later by the state Department of Health.

The law also requires that personnel operating ambulances have some degree of training. Effective from the date the law was signed, all ambulances providing basic life-support services must be manned by two people. After one year of this date, one of the two-member ambulance crew must be qualified as an ambulance attendant, a person who has completed courses in advanced first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

After two years, both members of the two-person crew must be qualified as ambulance attendants; and after three years, the crew must be made up of at least one attendant and one emergency medical technician, a person who has received further training.

According to Ms. Ream, all service groups in the county already offer at least basic life-support services. Most of the ambulance services also currently have at least one EMT on board when they are on an emergency call.

About eight out of 12 ambulance services in the county have received Volunteer Ambulance Services Certification under a state-administered program operating prior to the new law, she said. Under the new law, these service groups will not have to reapply for a license until the time their certification expires.

Other service groups in the county do not have the VAS certification, but offer a comparative service. Ed Helmick, chief of the Greensboro and Monongahela Township Fire Department, said his department's ambulance service has never applied for certification, but can meet the criteria.

Helmick said all the department's crews have at least one EMT on board. He added that the department should have few problems complying with the new law. "From what I've read, I don't think it will affect us too much," he said.

Other local ambulance services contacted also do not expect much problem complying with the law. One service, EMT Inc., had even taken into account the passing of such regulations when it formed about two and a half years ago. Spokesmen for two of the service groups, however, said it may be difficult getting enough EMTs to operate their ambulances.

"I don't think it will bother us too much at first, but when it comes down to saying we have to have an EMT, we might have some problems," said Peter Novak, chief of the Bobtown Volunteer Fire Department.

Novak said his company currently has only three EMTs, but is able to have at least one on every emergency call.

Because many of the department's members have full-time jobs and work shifts, they cannot attend the training classes required to become EMTs, Novak said.

Rex Rohm, chief of the Richhill Township Volunteer Fire Department, also said his company currently has enough EMTs to staff its emergency runs, but added that people seem to be becoming more reluctant to attend the EMT classes.

To be an EMT, a person has to take 180 hours of classroom training; and 10 hours of hospital emergency room training. They must then take a two-hour written test and a practical examination, said Ream. The EMT certification must be renewed every three years.

All of the ambulance services in the county are run by volunteers, said Ream. Many of these people do not have the time to devote to training. "With everyone running volunteers, these are some of the problems you have," she said.

Ream also said several of the companies probably have not been able to receive VAS certification because of the cost of some of the equipment that is needed.

The law sets up a fund that will assist service providers with money for equipment and training. The money will come from an additional $10 fine on each moving motor violation.

The law also establishes regulations for hospitals that want to be identified as having trauma centers — centers equipped to treat victims of the severest injuries. These regulations will not affect Greene County Memorial Hospital, which provides emergency room services, but does not classify it as a trauma center.

First Parking Meters Installed 50 Years Ago

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Tuesday, July 16, marked the golden anniversary of an event which most of us would just as soon forget.

Probably not one reader is aware that on that date in 1935, the first parking meters were installed in Oklahoma City — and what makes it worse is the fact a newspaper editor was largely responsible.

In the early 1930s there were nearly 30 million cars and trucks on the highways in the United States. Traffic was not a major problem, but when drivers parked their vehicles, a major problem occurred.

Merchants were the first to scream. On many occasions, a merchant would park his vehicle in front of a competitor's place of business. Hardly ethical, the practice did affect business to some extent.

The only method of controlling the parking spaces was the use of a piece of chalk. Policemen would mark a parked automobile's tire with chalk and then ticket those with the chalk mark when he returned in an hour or so. But chalk can be wiped off, and frequently was.

It became a national problem. People who were otherwise law-abiding would wipe off the chalk.

City fathers in Oklahoma City finally had enough and appointed a special committee to look into the matter. Appointed chairman of the committee was Carl C. Magee, a crusading newspaper editor who exposed the infamous Teapot Dome oil lease scandal that rocked the Harding Administration.

Magee learned that four out of five automobiles parked in the downtown area remained in the same location for most of the day. He decided some sort of mechanical device was needed and challenged engineers at Oklahoma State College to come up with such a device.

By 1933, two college instructors had developed the first complete and operable parking meter which they called "Black Maria."

While looking for a manufacturer, two other men had formed the Macnick Co. in Tulsa to develop a meter. Ultimately, the first production parking meter combined ideas from both models.

In 1935, the Dual Parking Meter Co. was formed in Oklahoma City and meters were manufactured by the Macnick Co. in Tulsa.

The first production meter was a manually operated unit that provided one hour's time for a nickel. The initial installation involved 150 units that were placed in service on July 16, 1935. Meters were placed on one side of the block and on the other side in the next block so there was a free side and a metered side on each city block.

It has been noted that groups of citizens gathered around each meter on that first day and loudly protested the installation. The complaints continue to this day. Many of those who protested the loudest didn't even own an automobile.

Within three days, merchants all over the city were petitioning the city to install meters on their streets.

The idea caught on and soon there were American-made meters in Malaysia, Australia, Chile, Fiji, the Netherlands and dozens of other nations.

Not only did meters cause a turnover of autos, they proved a windfall in municipal revenue. In Washington, D.C., for example, the city realized $19 million in meter revenue during 1980. On a much smaller scale, Waynesburg realized nearly $31,000 in meter revenue in 1984. Without such revenue, the borough would have to raise taxes almost three mills to make as much money.

Lower Ten Mile Authority OKs Loan For Sewerage Plan

JEFFERSON — The Lower Ten Mile Joint Sewerage Authority has approved a resolution authorizing the borrowing of $615,000. The money will be used to prepare the final engineering plans and specifications for the authority's proposed sewerage treatment system.

The resolution also authorizes the payment of $103,932, most of which is for engineering fees and the legal fees connected with preparing the loan agreement.

The authority also approved an agreement with its five member municipalities, explaining how the $6.3 million project will be conducted and financed. It also includes provisions describing how the $615,000 loan and bond issue are to be guaranteed. This agreement had already been approved by the five municipalities.

Under the agreement, the municipalities will guarantee the loan and will have to repay the money if the authority defaults on its payment, said bond counselor Vic Lynch.

The authority intends to borrow the money from the First National Bank of Carmichaels at a floating rate of 55 percent of the bank's commercial prime rate, although at a rate not less than 5 percent and not higher than 8 percent.

The fees that are to be paid out of this money, and approved as part of the resolution, include $4,612 for the commitment fee to the lending institution; $8,170 for the fee for the authority's solicitor, Hook and Hook; $9,906 for bond counselor fees; and $81,244 for the cost of engineering work already completed.

The remainder of the money, about $511,000 will be invested and withdrawn as needed. Of the entire amount of the loan, it has been estimated that $330,700 will be used for engineering fees, $97,000 for land and rights of way; $98,400 for interest for two years, $22,100 for financing fees and $61,687 for administrative and miscellaneous costs. The fees that were approved in the resolution will be deducted from the estimated costs.

One authority member questioned payment to the engineer, quoting the wording in an agreement with the firm which said 25 percent of the fee could be paid if 50 percent of the work was completed and if the authority had received an advance from the state.

John Schaudé of Betz, Converse and Murdock told the authority 50 percent of the design work is completed and he will present the authority with an itemized bill. The authority has not received the advance from the state. Schaudé said later he will be preparing the application.

Authority member Tom Fudala of Clarksville Borough voted against motions concerning the loan and the agreement with the municipalities. He said afterwards that there were some things in the agreements not clear to him.

In other business, the board: Directed the engineer to send estimates on tap-in fees and monthly rates to the Jefferson-Morgan School Board, which had been asked to consider connecting to the proposed system.

Was informed that surveyors will be in the Jefferson Township and Jefferson borough areas.

Two Masontown Men Charged With Theft

CARMICHAELS — Carmichaels Borough Police have arrested two Masontown residents for the theft of bicycles in Carmichaels.

Chief Robert Arameish reported that Ronald Willard of 405 South Main Street and Orval James Piper of 317 South Main Street have been charged with theft by unlawful taking.

The charges involve the theft of two girls' 10-speed bicycles from a residence at 204 South Vine Street, Carmichaels, on June 20.

With the cooperation of the Mason-town Police Department, Carmichaels police arrested Piper at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 13, and Willard at 12:20 a.m. Sunday, July 14.

Both were arraigned before Magistrate Paul Shenal of Masontown, who set bail at $5,000 each. When they were unable to post bond, they were returned to Carmichaels and arraigned before Magistrate Emil Bertugli. Both were lodged in the Greene County jail.

The two bicycles plus parts of other bikes were recovered, Chief Arameish said.

College Offers Commercial Art, Office Work Training

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College is looking for a few good men and women who want to receive basic training in commercial art or office techniques.

In conjunction with the Job Training Partnership Act, the college is offering courses in Office Techniques and Pre-Press Graphic Arts to persons who are either unemployed or underemployed.

The Office Techniques program is designed for people considering a career as a business office worker. It will provide students with fundamental skills and knowledge in a structure program emphasizing competencies needed by employees in an automated office. All 30 credits for the program can be applied toward an associate degree in secretarial science.

There also are openings in the Pre-Press Graphic Arts (commercial art) program that prepares students for entry-level positions in a variety of graphic arts or art-related careers. The program provides basic information in the visual communication field and practical experience in graphic design, typography, photography and layout.

The Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) of 1982 is a major federal initiative to reduce unemployment among both young people and adults. It establishes a formal partnership between private industry, the public sector and vocational institutions for the purpose of planning, designing and providing federally financed training.

JTPA is targeted to reach individuals identified as most in need — economically disadvantaged youth, low-skilled and chronically unemployed adults, and skilled workers who have lost jobs in declining industries and regions. Federal resources subsidize tuition, books and fees.

JTPA is administered locally by the Washington-Greene Job Training Agency, which has an office in Room 332, Hillcrest Shoppes, Waynesburg.

Another Theft Try Reported

WAYNESBURG — Borough police have reported another attempt to steal a vehicle in the East End section.

The latest incident occurred near the Busy Bee at 844 East High Street when the ignition and dashboard of a vehicle was damaged during an apparent attempt to steal the van.

Police also are looking at another incident that could be related to the theft attempts.

A lock was forced on a garage owned by Phoebe Shriver, 80, of 271 North Porter Street. Although nothing was reported stolen, police theorize someone could have been looking for tools.

Widow Files Suit Over Fatal Crash

WAYNESBURG — The widow of a Waynesburg man who was killed in a highway accident in Allegheny County Jan. 10 has filed suit against the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation on the grounds that a badly designed medial barrier and inadequate removal of snow and ice was the cause of the accident.

The lawsuit asking damages "in excess of $10,000" was instituted in Greene County Court recently by Connie F. Pyle of Waynesburg on behalf of herself and her three sons.

Her husband, Wayne E. Pyle, 38, was fatally injured when the car in which he was a passenger crossed the medial barrier on Parkway West, causing a four-car accident. Eric A. Ahrens, 47, Washington, driver of the car in which he was riding, also was killed.

The accident happened about two miles east of the Greater Pittsburgh Airport, where both men were employed as mechanics by USAir.

The lawsuit states that the highway department was working on the road at that time and had installed a medial barrier which created a hazardous condition. It claims that despite prior accidents at the same location, the department had failed to erect any warning signs or lights to warn motorists that it was a dangerous area.

Landowner Complaints On Hunting Reasonable

Ever since a record buck was taken in Greene County several years ago, the county has become a mecca for hunters during the deer hunting season.

As might be expected when hunters pour into the county from outside, not all of them are good sportsmen. Fences have been cut, four-wheeled vehicles have run over cropland, and livestock has been shot.

It's easy to understand, therefore, why a group of Greene County landowners have banded together to demand an amendment to the state game laws which would require that a person hunting on private property receive written permission from the property owner to do so.

The landowners say they are not opposed to hunting, but merely want to know who is on their land if any damage is done. They also point out that such an amendment would give game protectors the power to file charges against illegal trespassers — power they do not now have.

Despite a threat from the landowners to mount a campaign to close private land in the county to hunting, it's doubtful that such an amendment has much of a chance of passage.

The Game Commission has opposed such legislation in the past, and officials in Harrisburg say there is little likelihood they will change their position. James Lovett, executive director of the Games and Fisheries Committee of the House of Representatives, said the Game Commission feels the requirement would be virtually impossible to enforce since there are more than 500,000 in the field during deer season.

Many of them, he points out, hunt in northern tier counties where vast areas of woodland are owned by corporations and others who would not be available to give written permission to hunt on their property.

At the same time the interest of small property owners such as those in Greene County deserve protection.

Lovett said that one possibility could be an amendment to the game laws which would give game protectors the power to enforce the illegal trespassing provision of the crimes code.

State Senator Barry Stout said he will ask the Game Commission to schedule a public hearing in Greene County to consider the complaints of the property owners and discuss possible ways of solving their problem.

If such a hearing were held, it might dispel some of the feeling which the landowners have that the Game Commission is insensitive to their interests and cares only for the dollars it takes in through the sale of hunting licenses.

Pioneer Scout Is Honored

WAYNESBURG — Charles Morris, one of two surviving members of Waynesburg's first Boy Scout troop, was recently honored by a delegation from Troop 1287 of Waynesburg.

This year, the Boy Scouts of America are celebrating their 75th anniversary. An on-going project of Troop 1287 during this Diamond Jubilee year has been to search out and honor members of Waynesburg's first troop which organized in 1911.

WAYNESBURG — Greene County taxpayers will have to wait until next year to reap the benefits from increased school subsidies included in the 1985-86 state budget signed into law by Gov. Dick Thornburgh.

Officials of the county's five school districts indicated recently that the increase was approved following adoption of their budgets, which means that the added revenues will be available to help keep the lid on property taxes for the 1986-87 school year.

The Jefferson-Morgan and Southeastern Greene districts benefited most from the state subsidy increases, which, on a statewide basis, will average out at 8.45 percent higher than 1984-85 payments.

Jefferson-Morgan and Southeastern Greene will receive increases of 12.7 percent and 12.2 percent, respectively, as a result of their being eligible for new Small District Assistance Grants that provide additional funding to small districts (under 1,500 students) with great financial need.

West Greene's tax levy for the coming year is 54 mills, which is well below those of other districts in the county. Its subsidy payment of $1,499,284 will represent an increase of $29,398 over the current year, which is the figure which was projected when the budget was adopted.

Jefferson-Morgan, which has a 114-mill tax levy for the coming year, had projected a state aid increase of $103,000 in adopting its budget. It will actually receive $1,720,368, which is $194,948 more than the current year.

The Central Greene and Carmichaels Area School Districts will receive close to the statewide average by getting increases of 8.4 percent and 8.3 percent, respectively.

The West Greene District is one of only 11 school districts in the state which will get the minimum increase of 2 percent over 1984-85 subsidies.

"The formula by which state subsidy is allocated leans heavily on local effort," West Greene Superintendent Paul Polink explained. "School districts which have relatively low property tax levies are unfairly penalized."

Business Manager Forest (Bud) Cottle said that some of the additional revenue will be needed for the new TELS remediation program to asstutents identified through a testing program as being in need of additional help.

"We expected to get $48,000 in TELS money but will actually be getting $28,000," he said.

"It doesn't seem practical to rework the budget for the coming year since the tax duplicates have already been printed and are ready to be mailed," he said. "To lower the millage at this time would cost a lot of money."

The Southeastern Greene District will receive an increase of $183,572, which will boost its 1985-86 state aid payment to $1,698,034. The district had anticipated an increase of some $100,000.

"The extra money will definitely be a big help," Superintendent Charles Wyda said. "We will be able to draw interest on it and have it available for next year. When you're in our position, you need all the help we can get."

Southeastern Greene's property tax levy of 131 mills is the highest in the county.

The Central Greene District will receive $3,212,980 in subsidy payments, which is $250,343 higher than 1984-85 and substantially more than the $127,000 increase which had been projected.

Business Manager Walter Stout said the additional revenues will be used to increase the cash carryover for next year's budget.

Louis Pasuzzo, business manager in the Carmichaels Area District, said much the same thing, pointing out that its tax bills for this year have already been printed which would make it impractical to reopen the budget. "It will be applied to next year's budget," he said.

Each of the five school districts will also receive an increase in state reimbursement for the cost of transporting students to non-public schools, with the payment being doubled from $35 per student to $70. It is, however, a minor factor in the overall cost of operation.

Pasuzzo, for example, said that it costs the Carmichaels Area School District some $32,000 to provide such transportation for 36 students. Doubling the aid will increase the reimbursement to $2,520.

Of the $28 million to be distributed to state school districts for student remediation programs based on results of the TELS tests conducted last year, Greene County districts will receive a total of $167,418 to help 1,278 students.

the original Boy Scouts of 1911 were deceased with the possible exception of Morris. A search to determine his status eventually led to contact with his sister, Mrs. Charles I. Faddis of Waynesburg.

Morris, who will be 90 on his next birthday, was found to be living at the Henry Clay Villa near Marleysburg.

On a recent Sunday afternoon, a delegation from Troop 1287 presented Morris with the special emblem. Taking part in the ceremony were youth members Dan Houghton and Brian Novogradac, troop committeeman Dr. Donald Helms and Scoutmaster Robert A. Scott.

Morris, nicknamed Whitey, was born in Holbrook and spent his early life in Waynesburg. His nickname comes from the fact he has had white hair his entire life.

An extremely towheaded youth, he related how his mother once caught him applying shoe polish to his hair.

After graduating from Waynesburg High School in 1915, he attended W&J College, Kiski Prep School and Waynesburg College. In early life, he was engaged in the contracting business with his father.

Morris points with pride to the fact they held the general contract for the construction of Margaret Bell Miller School in Waynesburg. Concrete road building was the firm's speciality. Morris constructed Route 21 to Carmichaels in two separate contracts as well as the same route from Rutan to Wind Ridge.

He later moved to Uniontown where he became a bituminous coal operator. He is the father of a son, Charles, and a daughter, Jarvislind.

County Landowners Seeking Legislation On Hunting Again

WAYNESBURG — A group of Greene County property owners, spearheaded by Harold Stockdale of Rogersville, is again pushing for legislation which would require hunters to obtain written permission from the owner before they hunt on private property.

If it is not forthcoming, they are making plans for a concentrated effort to close Greene County farms to hunting.

"We are not opposed to hunting, but we feel it is time that something is done to control irresponsible hunters who invade our land during deer season and do property damage," Stockdale said.

"Where's the equity and fairness in our spending hard-earned money to purchase land and pay taxes on that land, when the Pennsylvania Game Commission can operate a big business in the sale of hunting licenses, giving hunters implied permission to hunt anywhere in the state without requiring the permission of the landowner?"

In the past month, Stockdale and some 20 other property owners have circulated petitions calling for passage of the legislation. They have obtained the signatures of landowners who represent 49,000 acres (13 percent) of Greene County land.

The petitions have been turned over to state Rep. H. William DeWeese, who has agreed to introduce a bill to amend the act of June 3, 1937 (P.L. 1225, No. 316) whereby a permission slip from a property owner would be required in addition to a hunter's license if a hunter was found to be hunting on private property.

Stockdale said DeWeese introduced the same type of amendment in 1983, but the bill never got out of committee.

"Due to resistance by the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the lack of interest by legislators, no action has been taken on this proposed amendment," Stockdale said. "Now the Game Commission has chosen to increase the license fees for hunting licenses with still the total lack of regard for the landowners' rights."

Stockdale said that the problem has become increasingly acute in recent years as word has spread that Greene County is a prime deer hunting area.

"It isn't the local hunters who cause most of the problems," he said. "People come in from all parts of western Pennsylvania and a lot of them have little regard for the rights of our property owners."

He said that in the last 12 years he has had fences cut and has lost two cows, a pony and a horse to unidentified hunters. Another person he talked to said he had had 11 cows shot in the past 15 years.

"Although the Game Commission does not openly and actively inform hunters of this fact, it is illegal to trespass on private property to hunt without the permission of the owners," Stockdale said. "The problem is that it is up to the property owner to identify the trespassing hunter, which is often impossible, and to file a private prosecution. The amendment we want would make state game protectors responsible for enforcement."

If the amendment is adopted, a person who wants to hunt on private property would be required to give his name, address and hunting license number to the landowner, who could then give him a permission slip to hunt on the land. If he were caught hunting without the permission slip, the hunter would be subject to prosecution by the Game Commission.

"The persons who have signed these petitions, as well as many others who have been contacted since that time, will make a concentrated effort to close lands to hunting unless there is some cooperation given by the Pennsylvania Game Commission," Stockdale said. "Why buy a hunting license, especially at the now higher rate, if you are not going to have sufficient land to hunt on?"

DCA Awards Grants To 3 Communities

The state Department of Community Affairs announced recently that grant proposals from three communities in Greene County have been approved for funding under the 1984-85 federal Community Development Block Grant program.

Cumberland Township will receive $136,555, which will be used to install sewer lines on Bosses Row in Crucible and for improvements at township parks. Waynesburg Borough will receive $105,003 for repairs to a trickling filter at the borough sewage treatment plant; and Franklin Township will receive $110,145 to extend a water line through the Blairtown section of the township along Route 218 south of Waynesburg.

In April, DCA had deferred action on the three grant proposals until problems or deficiencies had been corrected. The three communities were eligible for the grants under the entitlement section of the program.

DCA earlier had announced that the county's 1984-85 allotment of competitive, non-entitlement funds would be awarded to Clarksville Borough. The borough had
