Surrey Donated To Museum

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Carolyn Milliron of Waynesburg has donated a three-seat surrey to the Greene County Historical Society and it will eventually be on permanent display at the county museum.

The surrey apparently has not been used for decades and has been housed in an old shed along "Memory Lane" on Route 88 in Franklin Township.

Despite a leaking roof on the storage shed which allowed some water damage, the surrey is in remarkably good condition. Traces of the blue and green paint and yellow pinstripes can still be seen on the sides.

There are three seats, two of them removable and reversible and a hinged tailgate allows for the hauling of lumber or other supplies.

The surrey was owned by Thomas H. and Harriet Inghram who lived in the large brick home along Memory Lane. The home has been known locally as the Allison Home for several years.

Mrs. Milliron, who was born in the home and raised by the Inghram family, said she vividly recalls the family taking its Sunday rides in the surrey which was driven by a black man named "Kirby."

"I think the last time it was used was in a huge parade in Waynesburg. The surrey was hitched to horses owned by the late Charles Orndorff. I think Mary Rinehart, Josephine Denney and Ollie Coffroth rode in the surrey," Mrs. Milliron said. She believes the parade was in the 1930s.

She also recalls an antique dealer from Mackinac Island, Mich., making a special trip to Waynesburg in an effort to purchase the surrey. He returned home empty-handed because no one would set a price.

"I personally think the surrey should remain in Greene County and that's why I am glad to donate it to the historical society," Mrs. Milliron said.

Research in the library at the local museum resulted in Alvah Headlee finding an old catalog from Myers Carriage Co. in Franklin. A picture in the catalog indicating item No. 385, a full platform, three-seat wagon, is probably the exact model owned by the Inghram family. There is no date on the catalog but the surrey was believed to have been constructed in the late 1800s.

Farley Toothman, president of the historical society, is now looking for volunteers with the knowledge and skill to refinish the wagon.

DeWeese In Campaign To Dredge Ryerson Lake

WAYNESBURG — A major silting problem is threatening the future of the lake at Ryerson Station State Park and state Rep. H. William DeWeese of Waynesburg believes there is a good chance the Department of Environmental Resources can be persuaded to do something about it.

DeWeese also believes that chances of getting action will be greatly assisted by a campaign currently being conducted by county fishermen to rally support among local residents for dredging the lake — a job which will cost an estimated $1 million.

"I've been talking to Ken Dufalla about the work he is doing to get petitions circulated and signed and would welcome any letters on the issue," the Greene County legislator said. "It will all help in the pressure which Sen. (J. Barry) Stout and I will be exerting to get the job done."

Dufalla, a resident of Waynesburg R.D. 1 and a part-time park employee, has been heading a campaign for several months to circulate petitions among sportsmen's clubs and other organizations concerned about the effect that silting is having on the lake's fishing potential.

He said the Greene County chapter of the Izaak Walton League pledged its complete support and that Martin Niverth, executive director of the Greene County Conservation District, has agreed to do all he can to help.

"On top of that I got a call from a man in Washington who pointed out that Ryerson Station is the only park in this end of the state which is equipped for handicapped fishermen," Dufalla said. "And the handicapped facilities are along that part of the lake most affected by the silting."

When Ryerson park opened in 1960, the lake which forms its central attraction covered 62 acres, reaching well up into the North Fork of Wheeling Creek, from which it was formed. Twenty-five years later the size of the lake has been reduced by an estimated 20 acres and its depth at the center has been reduced from 22 feet to 18 feet.

Park Superintendent Dave Barrett has tried unsuccessfully to have funds for dredging the lake included in the DER park budget for the past two years. He estimates there are some 225,000 cubic yards of silt which should be removed.

DeWeese said he was aware of the silting problem when the late Ron Duke was park superintendent, and was able to obtain funding for partial dredging of the lake several years ago.

"I've already written a brief note to (DER Secretary) Nick DeBenedictis about the problem and the need for a complete dredging, and Sen. Stout and I will be following it up with a formal presentation," DeWeese said. "That's why we need all the supporting data we can get."

The state representative said it may be impossible to obtain approval for the job during the current fiscal year because DER contingency funding is very limited. He is optimistic, however, that if nothing has happened by next spring, the DER will agree to include the project in its 1986-87 budget.

"It may be possible to get members of the House Appropriations Committee and the Conservation Committee to visit the county to see the problem for themselves," he said, noting that he serves on the Appropriations Committee.

State Pays Authority For Water Line

HARRISBURG — A check for $125,731 has been sent to the Southwestern Pennsylvania Water Authority, according to state Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer.

The check represents final payment of a $130,000 business infrastructure development grant on behalf of Baker Mine Services, Inc., for extending a public water supply line to the company's new manufacturing facility in Franklin Township.

Dwyer explained the grant was made possible by legislation approved last year.

The act empowers the state Department of Commerce to award grants to local sponsors for the construction, rehabilitation or repair of infrastructure improvements necessary to complement industrial investment by private companies.

The water authority, based in Jefferson, was the sponsor for the business development grant to extend the public water supply to Baker Mine Services.

The new plant cost $3.5 million to construct and it will provide approximately 100 new jobs within three years.

Three More Sentenced In Drug Case

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The final round of sentencing of defendants charged in Waynesburg's cocaine ring investigation was completed in Greene County Court Monday, Sept. 23, but Assistant Attorney General Gary Mogil said that additional arrests will be made in the future.

"This completes the first round, but the investigation is still proceeding in several directions," Mogil said. "We are following up on names and leads which surfaced during the investigation, the Balsamo trial and the taking of pleas, and anticipate that some additional arrests will be made in the future."

Franklin Twp. Supervisors Vote To Terminate Contract

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Supervisors Monday afternoon (Sept. 23) voted to terminate their contract with the Central Tax Bureau which has been collecting the per capita and earned income taxes for years.

The move does not necessarily mean the firm will not be given a new contract when the old one expires Dec. 31. However, the township is required to notify Central Tax Bureau within 90 days of the expiration of the present contract.

Central Tax Bureau, earlier this month, presented a new proposal to the township which calls for a lower

County Planners Review Plans For Health Center

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Preliminary plans for a proposed health center in Dunkard Township were reviewed by the Greene County Planning Commission at its monthly meeting Monday, Sept. 23.

They were submitted by South-eastern Greene Community Health Centers Inc. in connection with a preapplication being made to the Farmers Home Administration for a construction loan.

According to the application, the new health center would be located on Spur Route 616, between Dilliner and Newtown. The $750,000 structure would enable the agency to close existing health centers it operates in Bobtown and Greensboro.

According to Cynthia C. Julich, building project coordinator, the health centers have a greater patient demand than the present buildings can accommodate. The new building, measuring 64 by 90, feet would provide a modest increase in patient-care space and additionally would provide space for community activities when the center is not being used for patient care.

Julich noted that it is not considered an expansion project since no change in staffing is anticipated.

Proposed funding for the center includes $400,000 from federal sources, $100,000 from state sources, $50,000 from Community Health Centers and $300,000 from other sources. The agency has applied for a Community Development Block Grant of $247,000. A community fund raising drive is scheduled for the month of October to be followed in November and December with private and corporate fund raising efforts.

The Greene County service area includes Dunkard, Greene, Monongahela and Perry townships and Greensboro Borough. In addition, the present centers serve several municipalities in Fayette County.

The planning commission gave its endorsement to the application, noting that the proposed facility could provide adequate sewage treatment through the use of an elevated sand mound.

In other action, the planning commission gave conditional final approval to plans by the First United Methodist Church of Carmichaels to construct a parking lot at the corner of South Street and Vine Street (Route 88). County Planner Valerie Cole was authorized to give final approval as soon as a letter of approval has been received from Carmichaels Borough Council and approval is received from the Greene County Conservation District.

The lot will be located on property the church has purchased from Orpha Baily, with part of the lot being reserved for eventual construction of a church manse.

Conditional final approval was also given to revised plans for construction of a Domino Pizza outlet at the corner of North Morris and Franklin Streets in Waynesburg.

Mrs. Cole noted that the developer has purchased an adjoining lot since plans were first presented several months ago, which has resulted in relocation of the building on the property to take care of several reservations about the adequacy of the site as to its size and available parking facilities. She also said that acquisition of a sewer tap which served an existing house which will be torn down, as well as execution by the borough of a sewerage consent agreement, has eliminated the problem of lack of a tap into the borough sewer system.

Final approval will be given after the developer has received a zoning permit from Waynesburg Borough, a letter of adequacy has been received from the Conservation District, and use of a driveway to the existing house has been clarified.

Debra Hook of Waynesburg was elected vice chairman of the planning commission to succeed Michael Lucas of Carmichaels, who has moved from the county. Robert Lang, Marion Rush and David Smith were named as planning commission representatives on the board of Greene County Industrial Developments Inc.

Waynesburg Residents To Save Under New Garbage Contract

By Bob Niedbala, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg Borough residents will save $12 a year in garbage collection fees as a result of a garbage collection contract awarded by Waynesburg Borough Council Monday, Sept. 23.

At a special meeting, council awarded the five-year garbage collection contract to Long Trucking Co. of Waynesburg.

The company, which holds the present collection franchise, submitted a low bid of $5 a month for curbside collection and $5.50 a month for backyard pickup. The only other bid was submitted by William H. Martin, Inc. of Washington. It called for a $5.37 fee for curbside collection and a $5.78 fee for backyard collection.

The bids had been opened at council's Sept. 10 meeting and had been referred to an attorney for review. The special meeting was called to award the contract.

There was little difference between the two bids and the determining factor in awarding the franchise should be the price to customers, council Chairman Charles Berryhill said, reading from the review conducted by attorney David Pollock.

The borough earlier adopted an ordinance concerning garbage collection. Under the ordinance, residents must either subscribe to the services of the franchised refuse collector or prove they have an acceptable means of disposing of their garbage.

A person who does not subscribe to the franchised collector must obtain a permit from the borough and written permission from the landowner where the refuse will be dumped. The site must be approved by the state. A $36 fee will be charged for the permit.

Making the service mandatory should stop people from dumping garbage along county roads and prevent them from putting their garbage in other residents' garbage cans, said Councilman Kenneth Fox. Of the 1,800 homes in the borough, only 600 had used the service.

The increase in subscribers also will lower the cost to everyone, Berryhill said. The current fee is $6 a month.

In other business, council appointed Peter Jabour and Sharon Stephenson to the borough planning commission to replace Joe Watson, who resigned and Warren Hofnagle, whose term expired.

in the future."

Mogil, a Philadelphia attorney who was assigned by the attorney general's office to prosecute the Waynesburg cases, declined to give any names but would not rule out the possibility that charges could be brought against organized crime figures in New York City who were identified through testimony as cocaine suppliers.

Those sentenced Monday were Michael L. Conklin, 24, and John E. Collins, 32, both of Waynesburg, and Michael P. Jochyneck, 28, of Grand Prairie, Texas, formerly of Waynesburg.

Conklin, who pleaded guilty on March 21 to charges of arson and conspiracy to commit arson, was given 2 to 4 years in the Greene County jail, with the sentence to run concurrently with a 2-to-4-year sentence he received in Allegheny County for his involvement with Dr. Grover Phillippi in the kidnapping of a Mount Lebanon stockbroker.

Collins pleaded guilty on March 21 to one count of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver and one count of conspiracy to deliver cocaine. He was given a 20-months-to-7-year sentence in the Greene County jail, with credit for the 8 months he has already served and with the privilege of serving the sentence on weekends while he attends electronics school.

Jochyneck entered a plea Monday to one count of possessing hallucinogens with intent to deliver and one count of conspiracy in connection with furnishing Balsamo and others with mushrooms laced with hallucinogens. It was his car which was burned by Conklin when he did not pay Balsamo money which he owed him.

Jochyneck, who left Waynesburg for Texas after his car was burned, was given a 3-months-to-10-year sentence which was suspended because of time served in jail in Dallas, Texas, following his arrest there on a warrant issued by Greene County authorities. His attorney said he planned to return to Texas where he has a supervisory job in a restaurant.

Mogil, who did not make any recommendations on the imposition of sentences, pointed out that Conklin and Collins were both key witnesses in the trial of Balsamo, a 34-year-old Waynesburg pizza shop owner who was identified as the central figure in the drug ring. Following his conviction in April, Balsamo received a 16-to-40-year prison sentence.

He was the only defendant to come to trial, as guilty pleas were entered by the other 16 defendants arrested by Waynesburg Police Lt. David Clark as a result of his lengthy investigation.

In each of the three sentences imposed Monday, as in the prior cases, Judge Glenn Toothman stipulated that the defendants continue to cooperate with police in future stages of the investigation as a consideration for acceptance of plea bargains.

West Greene Accepts Koppers Offer

By Bob Niedbala, Staff Writer

ALEPPO — The West Greene School Board decided recently to accept $10,500 from the Koppers Company to end litigation concerning the roof on the high school addition.

The addition was constructed about three or four years ago, but the roof work wasn't satisfactory, said superintendent Paul Polink. He added that the district repeatedly had the company come out to the school to correct problems with the roof but the problems continued to exist.

Board member Anne Bower, who introduced the motion to accept the company's offer, said the board apparently felt it wasn't worth the money or the problems that would arise from litigation to further pursue the matter.

The board voted to readvertise the position of business manager. The district has never had a business manager and has relied on the board secretary to handle the district's day-to-day affairs.

Earlier in the year, the board voted to create such a position and advertised for applicants. Several applicants were interviewed, but the board couldn't decide on one, said Polink. In addition, one of the "leading applicants" found employment elsewhere, he said.

To attract the most qualified applicants, the board decided to raise the salary range the district would offer from $19,000-$25,000 to $21,000-$30,000.

Polink also reported that a problem with a water shortage, which has mainly affected the high school, has been alleviated, but the administration will continue to keep an eye on the situation. The problem "seems to have corrected itself," he said. The schools receive water from wells, which have run dry due to a lack of rainfall.

The board voted to present recognition to Connie Bryant, a high school teacher who was selected as one of 29 science teachers in the nation to participate in a seminar on the use of computers.

Two residents of Patterson Creek Run asked the board to send a bus about a mile and a half further up their road to pick up students.

The residents were informed that the law requires the district to provide transportation only if the child has to walk more than a mile and half. Board president Dan Morris added, however, that the board could bring the bus further up the road if it would mean an additional cost.

In other business, the board:
Voted Wyletta Stewart that they would investigate her request for transportation for her child, whom she said has to walk an unsafe road. Mrs. Stewart said the road is being used by heavy trucks.

Accepted the resignation of Davis Yoders from the position of assistant football coach. Yoders, a head teacher at Aleppo, said he couldn't get from the school to the practice field in time for practice. Gene Falvo was appointed interim assistant coach.

Voted to purchase a copy machine for the elementary schools at a cost of $3,595 and with an annual maintenance fee of $700.

Granted permission for Frances Dobosh and Bonna Crouse to attend a placement planning conference in King of Prussia at a cost of $650; and Connie Bryant to attend the National Science Teachers Association conference in Hartford, Conn. at a cost of $436.

Quit Smoking Clinic Planned

CARMICHAELS — For people who benefit from group support in their efforts to quit smoking, the American Lung Association of Southwestern Pennsylvania is sponsoring a "Freedom From Smoking" clinic program designed to help smokers kick their habit permanently.

The seven-session clinic will begin Monday, Oct. 14, and finish on Monday, Nov. 25, with a special celebration. Sessions will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Carmichaels Senior Citizens Center.

"This is a brand new clinic program which the American Lung Association has spent five years developing and testing across the country," said Janet Snead, clinic leader.

"The clinic emphasizes unlearning a habit and does not involve scare tactics. We try to make quitting a less stressful experience and help smokers figure out better ways to cope with situations that ordinarily trigger their lighting up," says Ms. Snead said. Small group exchanges are a vital part of the program.

"In this approach we help smokers develop an individual plan of action to quit, introduce them to relaxation techniques, identify their triggers, encourage exercise and help devise ways to avoid weight gain," she added. "By the third session, we expect smokers to be off cigarettes. Then we help them launch and practice their new lifestyle as a non-smoker. Maintenance — practicing staying off cigarettes — is a central focus," she said.

A free orientation session to introduce smokers to the program will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, in the Carmichaels Senior Citizens Center.

Fee for the program is $35 and enrollment is limited.

Waynesburg 4-H'er Wins State Title

UNIVERSITY PARK — Amy Osso of Waynesburg has been named State 4-H Fashion Revue winner for 1985. She was selected from among 10 finalists who were named at the state 4-H Fashion Review held Aug. 6 at Pennsylvania State University.

Miss Osso, a daughter of Herman and Jean Osso of Waynesburg, will represent Pennsylvania in the Fashion Revue at the National 4-H Congress to be held Dec. 1-5 in Chicago, Ill., where she will compete for one of $1,000 scholarships.

A 4-H winner for 11 years, Miss Osso won the competition with a classic wool suit which she made and modeled. The semi-fitted tweed jacket featured a notched collar, side panels and three well pockets. The charcoal grey, softly gathered straight skirt had a hand-picked zipper. Accenting the suit was a raspberry blouse with a high, pleated collar.

Three professional judges selected the 10 finalists on the basis of quality of garment construction, degree of construction difficulty, fit, and the contestant's modeling style.

Miss Osso was singled out as the state winner during the second phase of judging, in which a written report of her project, leadership, volunteer and service accomplishments during her 11 years in 4-H was evaluated.

She is a freshman at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va. Her trip to the National 4-H Congress will be paid for by the Simplicity Pattern Co. and the White/Enla Sewing Machine Co. sponsors of the scholarship awards.

The 4-H Fashion Revue is sponsored in Pennsylvania by the state 4-H office of the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service.

Plans For Bowlby Library Addition Are Outlined

WAYNESBURG — Plans for the proposed library addition were outlined for members of the Eva K. Bowlby Public Library Association at a meeting in the library recently.

Thomas F. Gerace, chairman of the library board of trustees, presented the plans to members of the association, which is made up of representatives of clubs, churches and other organizations which support the library.

He praised the architect, Duane D. Anderson of Washington, D.C., for his realistic approach in designing the addition and working out changes to be made in the existing library building. "The plans are very practical and attainable," he said.

He also pointed out that major consideration was given to the aesthetics of the neighborhood, with the addition being designed to blend in with the present structure and with the residential character of the area.

The library is housed in a stone mansion on North West Street which was donated to the community for use as a library by the late Eva K. Bowlby.

The two-story addition will be located in the proximity of the present parking lot, adjoining the present building at the basement and first-floor levels.

Gerace said that safety considerations will move most library activities to the new addition, which will measure 61 by 36 feet. The children's department will be located in the basement level, with the stacks for adults being placed on the upper level.

It will provide the library with 50 percent more shelf space for books, plus additional space for research and reading facilities. Plans also include a community room capable of accommodating 30 people.

With the addition, the library will be able to eliminate use of the third floor and half of the basement of the present building. A new entrance will be provided from Bowlby Street which will include access for the handicapped. A zoning board variance has granted the library 15 parking spaces which will be located as off-street parking off Bowlby Street, at the rear of the present structure.

Gerace explained that the library has applied for an LSCA Title II grant for construction funds. If approved, it will provide $125,000 which would be matched by the library. Action on the grant application by the State Library System is expected before December, Gerace said.

The architect's rendering, site plan and floor plans were placed on display and were available for discussion after the meeting.

Another matter of business was the report of the ad hoc committee appointed to consider a possible change in the length of terms of trustees. Committee members Marie Waldman and Michael Flinn recommended that the terms remain as specified in the constitution, which calls for trustees to be elected to three-year terms and to be eligible to be re-elected for one additional term. The association voted to accept the recommendation.

Association President Diane Morton appointed a nominating committee of Linda Nalitz, chairman, Marie Bryner and Pam Marcavitch to prepare nominations for the spring meeting. Three members of the board of trustees and the president and vice president of the association will be elected at that time.

awareness for the children. They also were given the chance to role play as a doctor and test for reflexes, blood pressure and heartbeat. Watching the doctor at work is Brian Knight and the doctor's daughter, Stacey, lower right.

Cement Plant Stirs Controversy

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — A state Department of Environmental Resources official said recently that a permit probably will be issued to cover construction of a controversial cement ready-mix plant in West Waynesburg.

Kenneth T. Bowman, chief of engineering services for DER's Bureau of Air Quality in the Pittsburgh area, said at a public meeting in Waynesburg that Richard Raymont's agreement to install the required filtering equipment will leave the agency with little recourse but to issue the permit.

But he added that Raymont first must receive a DER dam and encroachment permit to cover construction of a bridge across Ten Mile Creek to provide access to the small plant. "(Raymont) has satisfied us that he will have the proper equipment on the plant to control air pollution," Bowman said. "It is our experience with ready-mix cement plants that dust pollution is easily controlled with even minimal maintenance."

The DER official said the fact that Raymont already has built the plant will not affect the decision on the construction permit. However, he explained that Raymont cannot legally operate the plant until the construction permit is issued, an inspection is carried out to determine that it is operating properly, and an operating permit is issued.

If he begins operations before that, he would be subject to being cited and fined, Raymont said.

The informal hearing was held at the request of the Waynesburg Zoning and Hearing Board, which was reacting to complaints from residents on West Street, whose homes sit within a few hundred feet of the plant.

The zoning board became involved because Raymont first applied for a zoning permit to build the plant on a bottom on the Waynesburg side of Ten Mile Creek. When the zoning board rejected the application, Raymont located the plant on a section of the bottom across the stream in the township, where there are no zoning regulations.

Due to apparent confusion about the starting time of the hearing, the only persons present at the 7:30 p.m. starting time were Raymont and his attorney, Oliver Hormell.

When asked about recent action by borough council in posting a five-ton weight limit on a borough road that leads to the property, Hormell said the action was specifically directed against his client since the dead-end road leads only to Raymont's property.

As such, he said, it was an illegal action and any attempt at enforcement of the weight limit would result in a lawsuit.

The only residences on the road are a mobile home which Raymont occupies and a small house which he owns and rents.

After Raymont had left, several West Street residents appeared for the hearing, stating that it was their understanding it was scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Freeport Twp. Needs Help In Controlling Vandalism

NEW FREEPORT — The Freeport Township supervisors have appealed to residents of New Freeport to assist them in controlling vandalism in their community.

It is centered on the Pennsylvania Branch of Fish Creek, which flows through the rural town in southeastern Greene County.

Two years ago the Department of Environmental Resources, with assistance from the township, completed a major flood control project to protect residents from the periodic flooding which inundated the valley and damaged homes.

A half-mile of the stream bed was straightened, widened and deepened, the banks were cleaned and seeded, and a five-foot-high dike was built and along the town side of the creek.

"It was a beautiful job and was a real improvement for the town," township secretary Lucille Haines said. "People are proud of the way it looks and it would be a shame to allow a few people to ruin it."

The problem, she said, is being caused by people who are dumping garbage along the edge of the creek and by owners of four-wheeled vehicles who are driving along the dike and into the stream bed.

"The dike was seeded in grass and they are tearing it up. Pretty soon we'll begin to get erosion."

Museum Receives Gift Of Norman Rockwell Character Dolls

WAYNESBURG — When Mary Moline of Greensboro was a girl and young woman in West Virginia, 4-H played a big role in her life.

For that reason, Nell is her favorite among the 20 Norman Rockwell character dolls she has created since 1978. It was inspired by Rockwell's painting of a little girl showing her 4-H calf to a county agent.

"We were a big family growing up in a rural part of West Virginia (Bretz) and 4-H got us into the community and gave us something to do," the Greene County resident said Sunday. "I was a member at the age of 10 and a leader at 18. I credit it with giving me the leadership training I've used in the years since then."

Mrs. Moline was at the Historical Society museum Waynesburg recently to formally present a set of her Rockwell character dolls to the museum, where they will become part of the permanent collection.

The presentation was made to Historical Society President Farley Toothman during the museum's second annual Dollhouse Exhibition, which attracted more than 1,000 visitors over the weekend.

"It's a tremendous gift," Toothman said.

The dolls are faithful reproductions of some of the popular characters which Rockwell created through his paintings, including the "Doctor and Doll," "Young Love," "No Fishing" and "The Dreamer."

They reflect 20 years of fascination with the famous artist's work which has led to recognition of Mrs. Moline as one of the nation's experts on Rockwell and his work.

She is the founder and president of Rumbleseat Press Inc. and founder and president of Greene Valley World Investment Company Inc. She is listed in "Who's Who of American Women and Women of the World."

She is the author of the Norman Rockwell Encyclopedia, a chronological listing of Rockwell's published pieces, and her "Norman Rockwell Collectibles Value Guide" is currently in its fifth edition.

She is also the author of a series of children's stories based on some of the more famous illustrations. Two of them, "Mimi," the story behind a little girl's visit to a doctor to seek help for her doll, and "Anne," a tale based on the artist's "No Fishing" picture, were included in the gift to the museum.

"There are only 16 of the 20 dolls here now but the other four will be coming as soon as I can get them to the museum," Mrs. Moline said. Among them is a character study of Norman Rockwell with his ever-present pipe, the only doll which is not based on a painting.

Mrs. Moline, who now divides her time between Greensboro and her other home in California, designed and created her Rockwell character dolls in Greensboro as limited edition figures to be sold as collectibles to doll collectors in the United States. The porcelain faces were made to order in Germany while the costumes and wigs were crafted by various companies and shipped to Greensboro for assembly in her workshop.

Prior to her concentration on Rockwell, Mrs. Moline was a freelance writer specializing in restoration articles on the Model A and other Fords. Her first book, "Model 'A' Miseries and Cures," sold 10,000 copies and is now a collectible. Her second book, "The Best of Ford," which was a collection of more than 40 fictional and non-fictional articles on Henry Ford and his automobiles, is now out of print.

The show featured dollhouses, miniatures and antique dolls. The Judges' Special Award for the show went to S. Ward Montgomery of Uniontown for his display of hand-crafted furniture and other articles, with honorable mention going to Tom and Gladys Ciminel of Waynesburg. Caren Sangston Kulchock won the award for the best doll collection; Francine Horne of Waynesburg for the best dollhouse or structure, and Jennifer Dulaney of Waynesburg the children's award.

The People's Choice awards, given on the basis of voting by those attending, went to Tom and Gladys Ciminel.

"Hey, Wait a Minute (I wrote a book!)," by John Madden, with Dave Anderson. Ballantine Books (paperback). $3.95.

It sounds just like him. John Madden, I mean. He didn't so much write a book, he talked it. He rambled into a tape recorder, probably, and Dave Anderson, a Pulitzer Prize-winning sports columnist for the New York Times, put it together.

And so it sounds just like John Madden talking — interesting man, volatile coach, lovable announcer — jumping from one thing to another. He covers most of the things football fans want to hear about, but doesn't say quiet enough about any of them. Of course we'd like to know more about why he and Chuck Noll don't talk to each other any more, and more about what Al Davis is really like — things like that.

The Noll story, as Madden tells it, is fairly simple. "In later years, our rivalry with the Steelers got so intense, it separated Chuck and me as friends. We say hello now, but that's about it."

"In our early years as head coaches, we remained friends. But when the (Oakland) Raider-Steeler rivalry erupted into George Atkinson suing Chuck for slander for talking about a 'criminal element' in the NFL, the competition got the best of our friendship. It's a shame it had to come to that, but in our case it did. I think it's happened with other coaches. Hank Stram and Sid Gillman, to name two. And probably a few other who won't admit it."

"That doesn't diminish my admiration for Chuck as a coach. He doesn't get the respect he deserves."

Madden is of course a great storyteller, when he really decides to tell one. Most of them are funny, and insightful. "I've always heard about how intense Paul Brown was, but Don Coryell is the most intense coach I've ever been around. Long before he took over the Chargers, I was his defensive coordinator at San Diego State for three years. His intensity carried over into everything he did."

"In my years with him, the staff always went out to dinner once a week. But whenever one of us opened the door to get into his little station wagon, it always stunk. 'I forgot to leave the garbage at the corner,' Don would say."

"Once or twice we could understand. But this happened almost every week. Don's house was on top of a hill, up from where the garbage truck stopped. On garbage days, he would put the garbage cans in the back of the station wagon to drop off at the corner. But then he would start thinking about football and forget the garbage — until we opened the station wagon that night."

"Sometimes he even forgot his daughter Mindy was in the car. When she was little, she liked to ride down to the corner, then get out and run back home. But if Don forgot about her being in the back seat, Mindy would never say a word. Don wouldn't remember he had forgotten to drop her off until he got to the office and noticed her."

About Al Davis, Madden says, "Because of his reputation, whenever the Raiders were involved in anything controversial, Al got the blame. Which kept the blame off me. Anytime a helicopter flew over another team's practice field during the week, their coach assumed that Al had a spy up there." One coach sat in the visitors' locker room, staring up at the light fixture and muttering, "I know you're up there, Al Davis."

The coach "apparently thought that Al had planted a listening device in the light fixture. Leave it to Al to let him stew. When he was told about it, Al shrugged. 'The thing wasn't in the light fixture, I'll tell you that,'" he said.

Hotel Razing Points Up Problem Of Old Buildings

When Greensboro Borough Council voted recently to award an $11,488 contract to a Morgantown, W. Va., firm to tear down the old Monongahela House it climaxed more than two years of fussing with the River Buffs Association, which owns the building.

The River Buffs originally purchased the large structure with the intention of renovating it for use as a river museum. But it could not come up with the money it needed to complete the project and the building had fallen into disrepair to the point where it was a safety hazard.

The century-old building, located on River Street, once accommodated passengers on packet boats that traveled the Monongahela River and hosted a number of prominent people in the latter part of the 19th century. Demise of the packet boats sealed its fate and it was closed in the early 1900s.

Council initiated condemnation proceedings against the building in 1983 and last year brought charges against the River Buffs for violating the town nuisance ordinance, with fines which eventually totaled $3,548 being assessed against the association, which failed in its effort to persuade the Greene County Court that they should be put aside and the building preserved.

While an expenditure of $11,488 to have the building razed might not be significant in many municipalities, it represents a substantial commitment to Greensboro with its annual budget of $43,000. It is almost twice the $6,100 that the borough's 14-million property tax brings in each year.

While the cost of tearing down the building will be placed as a lien against the property, chances of recouping the outlay would seem slim.

Greensboro's experience epitomizes the problems which small towns have in getting rid of dilapidated and abandoned buildings.

Wary Deer

Among the most graceful of creatures that inhabit Greene County is the white-tailed deer. In addition to its swift movement, the animal is also known for its keen sense of hearing and smell. Here, a deer perks up its ears at an intrusive noise near its wooded home in Franklin Township, before sounding the alarm to other deer.

CURRENT COMMENT

LOTTERY BETTORS
Reading Eagle

"Never give a sucker a break."

No, Phineas T. Barnum didn't say that. He's credited with "There's a sucker born every minute." Old P.T. and his ilk, though, have waxed fat from application of the principle that suckers deserve no quarter.

The state House of Representative thinks the same way. At least, an even dozen of the 14 members of its Finance Committee do.

The State Lottery Commission went to the committee the other day with a proposal that it said would stimulate sales of its Daily Number and Big Four lottery. Once or twice a year, the commission would like to offer two chances of winning for the price of one.

To implement such a plan, however, the law provides that the Lottery Commission must go before the finance committees of the state House and Senate, and must gain the approval of the Independent Regulatory Review Commission. If the latter approves, moreover, the lottery board can go ahead, even if the legislative finance committees do not approve.

The Lottery Commission estimated that the special Daily Number drawings would cost an extra $700,000, and the additional Big Four contests would cost an average of $270,000. These sums would be made up, however, it contended, by increased sales. Daily numbers gross about $9.1 million a week.

The Daily Number pays off the rate of 500-to-1, and the Big Four at 5,000-to-1.

It's on that score, by the way, that the Lottery Commission offers tainted testimony. If it were really sincere in giving the suckers — oops, customers — a break, it would raise the payoff ratios.

Memories of some of us go back to the bad old days when the daily number operations (policy racket, as it was called by fastidious editors) were run by the underworld, and the hoodlums paid off at a rate of 700-to-one. (Currently, according to what we hear on the street, the bookies are paying off at 600-to-one.)

Tax free, moreover, if the winner could get away with it. The lottery proprietors were not noted for keeping meticulous records.

In fact, on toward the end of the Depression, when the numbers emerged from the big cities in which they originated, to spread out through small cities and hamlets and across the countryside, the payoff was a whopping 900-to-one.

The people who ran the numbers at those rates were called racketeers. At the shrunken payoff of 500-to-one, we call the operators public servants.

Oh, yes, back in the days when recognized racketeers were in charge, no minimum bet was inflicted on a customer. You could put a dime, or a penny, or even a fraction of a cent. Now, the state won't touch anything under a half dollar.

The state Lottery Commission says it wants to offer the two-for-one deal a few times a year in order to stabilize sales. That sounds like a high-falootin' way of saying it intends to encourage more people to bet more money for the gambling venture in which it is engaged.

If that is considered to be an appropriate way to serve the public interest, the Independent Regulatory Review Commission appropriately might ignore the signal of the legislative committee.

Jacket Offense Stuck In Reverse

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

FAIRMONT, W. Va. — The three-ring circus which is loosely termed an offense on Waynesburg College's football team, was hung out to dry Saturday, Sept. 21. The Yellow Jackets' performance was one worth forgetting.

Unfortunately, these kind of games are usually hard to forget. It was so pitiful that the most amusing part of watching the offense was figuring which of the Jackets' four quarterbacks were taking snaps. It seemed none of them wanted to, but they were shuffled in and out like they were trapped in a revolving door.

The highlight for Waynesburg came after 60 minutes of action when the final seconds mercifully ticked off the clock at Fairmont State's Rosier Field.

The final score: Fairmont State 42, Waynesburg 0.

According to the record books, Waynesburg has suffered worse losses, like a 51-0 blowout to Westminster in 1970 and a 54-0 thrashing to Carnegie Tech in 1922.

But what makes this loss so shocking is the fact Waynesburg entered the game 2-0 and ranked among the defensive leaders in NAIA Division II statistics.

Jacket head coach Bill Tornabene wasn't saying much about the loss. In fact, he offered no explanation. "What can I say? We just got beat. We're going to go back and try to regroup."

While Tornabene didn't offer any answers, Fairmont State head coach Wally Hood had his theory on why the game turned into a rout.

"No, Waynesburg isn't as bad as the score says. Not at all," said Hood, after watching his team improve its record to 1-1 overall. "I think our pressure created some situations and when the score got up there, because of our pressure, then they did some things they didn't want to do. I think they threw some passes they didn't necessarily want to."

And it didn't take a private eye to see the passes Waynesburg did throw weren't very effective. Tornabene started freshman Tim Null at quarterback but pulled him in favor of junior John Theofiledes in the Jackets' fourth series, after he completed just three of nine passes.

Null came back later and finished the game with four completions in 11 attempts with an interception while Theofiledes didn't fare any better, hitting three of 13 with an interception.

Sophomore Brian Virgin and freshman Jim Bozek were also thrown into the fire against an aggressive and unrelenting Fairmont defense that ran roughshod over the Yellow Jackets' offensive line.

Virgin completed one of three passes with an interception and Bozek hit one of six. Bozek came the closest to a long completion when he threw a long bomb in the direction of tight end Dave Zilli.

But, it was one of those days for Waynesburg. Zilli, easily Waynesburg's most consistent offensive player, dropped the pass while running five yards behind the Falcons' defense.

"I think we made a lot of mistakes, a lot of mistakes in execution," said Zilli, who caught two passes for 22 yards. "They took advantage of the mistakes we made and when you make as many as we did in the beginning, that doesn't leave you with much of a chance."

The scoring began for Fairmont in the first quarter on its first drive. The Falcons marched 64 yards on six plays, with the aid of 30- and 18-yard passes from Greg Higgins to Ed Coleman. Demetrius Rush capped the drive with a two-yard TD run.

After stalling on the next three series, Fairmont blew the game wide open in the second quarter. The Falcons recovered a fumbled punt by Matt Carlisle on the Jackets' 16-yard line and scored two plays later on a 13-yard sweep by Joe Kikume.

After Waynesburg could not move the ball, Fairmont drove 56 yards to score on a three-yard run by Rush. The Falcons scored again when Waynesburg's punter, Bob Abbiatici, got a bad snap from center and was tackled at his own 10. Kikume bulled 10 yards for the score on his team's next play.

Less than one minute later, linebacker Calvin Washington intercepted a pass by Virgin and returned it to Waynesburg's one-yard line. Rush ran in on the next play and Fairmont led 35-0 at the half.

Washington, who had three interceptions overall, finished the scoring in the third quarter when he intercepted a pass by Null and raced 39 yards for the score.

Fairmont rolled up 151 yards passing, with Coleman catching seven passes for 125 yards. It also totaled 141 yards rushing.

Meanwhile, Waynesburg fizzled on offense for the third consecutive game. The four quarterbacks, never playing long enough to establish continuity, combined for 45 yards passing while the Jackets got 23 nets yards rushing. Morris Hundley led the team with 14 yards on four carries.

"I don't think we were riding too high. This just makes us realize a good team can lose," Zilli said. "A 42-0 loss is bad but maybe not as emotional as 7-6... we have to bounce back."

J-M's Jamison Romps In Win Against Mikes

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

CARMICHAELS — Maybe he was hiding in the haze which enveloped the field at Carmichaels High School Friday night, Sept. 20, but each time Dave Jamison sliced through the Mikes defense, it meant headaches for the hometown fans.

Jamison, you see, is Greene County's latest phenom. The small running back from Jefferson-Morgan has a low center of gravity and workman-like attitude that carry him through and over defenses.

Friday the Mikes were grabbing haze, er, air as Jamison romped for 114 yards on 16 carries and scored three touchdowns, leading the Rockets to 34-8 victory in a Section 4-A game.

The win keeps Jeff-Morgan undefeated at 4-0 overall and first-place 3-0 in the section.

"They just physically pounded us and we didn't do anything," Carmichaels' head coach Tom McCombs said. "What more can I say. We got totally outplayed."

Outplayed is hardly a strong enough explanation of the rout. While Jamison and his buddies on offense were running wild all over the place, Carmichaels, now 0-4 overall and 0-3 in the section, seemed to do everything wrong on offense.

The Mikes managed to gain just 80 total yards on offense while suffering three fumbles and three interceptions.

"I don't have an answer, if I did we wouldn't be 0-3," McCombs said.

"We'll keep searching down the squad to find someone that can play. We're playing a lot of seniors so far, about 10 or 11, and if we can find players to come in, maybe we should make some changes. You have to have players capable, though... to come in and do better."

Jefferson-Morgan head coach Bob Keys was unavailable for comment.

But Jamison had plenty to say with his rushing, which is based on a combination of determined running and lightning quick feet.

"He runs hard and he did a good job for them," McCombs said. "But we've played three games (in the conference) and given up something like 370 yards, 180 and now this to Jamison. He had the least."

"We just didn't execute well on offense or defense."

Rocket quarterback Tom Evosrich also had a solid game, throwing 75 yards and two touchdowns while completing seven of 15 passes. The senior threw for the game's first score a little more than four minutes into the game when he connected with fullback Dave Gamble on an eight-yard touchdown.

Then it was Jamison's turn. The 5-9, 160-pound senior raced 14 yards after the Rockets sacked Carmichaels' punter, then sprinted 21 yards for a score on a nifty misdirection draw play, with both coming midway through the second quarter as J-M built a 20-0 lead.

Jamison scored again in the third quarter when he and Evosrich connected on a 20-yard scoring throw. Jeff Jento finished out the scoring, ramming in from one-yard out in the fourth quarter.

For the Mikes, well, it was a long night. Quarterback Roger Waters, touted as a Division I prospect in the pre-season, had his troubles. The 6-4, 210-pound senior was chased out of the pocket on nearly every play and completed just two of 20 passes for seven yards. His receivers dropped seven passes.

"Anytime you drop that many you have to start questioning," McCombs said.

Carmichaels Board Deals With Personnel Matters

CARMICHAELS — The Carmichaels Area School Board, acting on personnel matters at its Thursday meeting, Sept. 19, accepted the resignation of girls' assistant basketball coach Lisa Doman and said the position will be posted.

The board offered employment to Vicki Rice as senior high secretary. She is now substituting in that position.

Ruth Watson and Robert Watson were appointed junior high council sponsors. Since no member of the staff had applied for the post of junior high cheerleading sponsor, the board approved seeking a sponsor from the community.

Eagles 18, Pioneers 0

ROGERSVILLE — Avella High School picked up its first win of the season in handing West Greene its first defeat, 18-0, in exhibition action Friday night, Sept. 20.

Quarterback Paul Brinsky passed for two touchdowns. Brinsky completed six of nine attempts, including a 45-yard TD pass to Mark Houpt in the first quarter and an eight-yard TD strike to Matt Crumy in the fourth. Brinsky finished the night with 102 yards passing.

West Greene, now 2-1 on the season, had 184 total yards — 89 rushing and 95 passing.

Small Business Seminar Set For Oct. 15

WAYNESBURG — Ninety-five percent of all businesses that opened their doors in 1984 will not be around by 1989, according to statistics compiled by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

The failure rate stems, not from lack of financing, but bad management on the part of the owner. Too many people who enthusiastically start their own business enterprises are ill-prepared to run an independent business.

There is, however, a source of assistance for area residents who are thinking about starting their own business enterprise.

The Fayette/Greene County Chapter of SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives) will host a public seminar on "Starting and Managing a Small Business," from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 15, at the Uniontown Holiday Inn.

Co-sponsors of the conference are the Uniontown Area Chamber of Commerce and the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Speakers with expertise in several fields will discuss aspects of business startup, with special emphasis on common problems facing small business owners.

Persons interested in attending the seminar can make reservations by contacting the Uniontown Area Chamber, 11 Pittsburgh Street, Uniontown, Pa. 15401, or phone 437-4571. A registration fee of $10 covers luncheon and all conference materials.

SCORE operates under the authority of the SBA, providing free counseling for individuals in small business or who may be starting a business.

Campaign Reaches $80,000

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County United Way campaign for 1985 has reached the $80,000 mark in contributions and pledges. The figure was announced at the campaign committee's weekly meeting held at Waynesburg College. The sum represents 74 percent of the campaign's goal of $110,000.

Although the pace of giving slowed somewhat during the fourth week of the drive, Chairman Lois Hewett of the West Penn Power Co. told volunteers to give an extra effort during the final two weeks of the drive so the county United Way campaign can go "over the top for the second straight year."

In a report on the industrial division of the campaign, it was noted that both West Penn Power and the Weyerhaeuser Co. are approaching their goals.

During the community division report, the committee gave special praise to volunteer Jack Provance, owner of Bobtown Market, for his organizational efforts in Bobtown. As a result of a door-to-door drive in that community, more than 100 new contributors were logged.

While the campaign is only at 74 percent of its goal, it was noted that last year's drive was at about the same point after four weeks. The campaign ends Oct. 2.
