Coal Resources Are Big Factor In Levying Taxes

WAYNESBURG — Greensboro Borough is just about as far as you can get in Greene County from Jackson and Gray Townships.

Greensboro is in the southeastern corner of the county, while the rural townships are in the far western part.

And just as great as the distance which separates them geographically is the gap between the amount their residents must pay in property taxes.

Greensboro residents this year bear the heaviest real estate tax burden in Greene County. Their combined county, municipal and school property tax levies for 1985 add up to a whopping 166.25 mills.

That means that a person owning a house in Greensboro which is assessed at $15,000 pays a total of $2,493.75 in real estate taxes. Since property in Greene County is assessed at 30 percent of market value, the tax bill — assuming the accuracy of the assessment — is just under 5 percent of the $50,000 market value of the house.

Jackson and Wayne Township residents, on the other hand, are paying a total levy of 77.25 mills this year. On that same property assessed at $15,000, their tax bills for this year total $1,158.75 — a difference of $1,335.

A compilation of 1985 taxes in the county's 20 townships and six boroughs has been prepared by the Pennsylvania Economy League, along with a breakdown of the total assessed value of taxable property in each of the municipalities.

It shows, in general, that the highest real estate taxes are in the eastern part of the county, gradually shading to the lowest levels in western Greene County, and that 17 of the 26 municipalities have levies which exceed 100 mills, or 10 cents on every dollar of assessed value.

The big reason for the variations lies with school taxes and with the geographical distribution of coal assessments as a factor in the tax base.

The county real estate levy of 21.25 mills is uniform for all municipalities.

Township levies range from a low of 2 mills in Jackson and Gray townships to a high of 15 mills in Wayne Township.

Borough levies range from a low of 6.5 mills in Jefferson and 7 mills in Rices Landing to a high of 31 mills in Waynesburg. Clarksville has an 11-mill levy while both Carmichaels and Greensboro have 14-mill levies.

School taxes, on the other hand, range from a low of 54 mills in the West Greene District, which includes Jackson and Gray townships in its nine municipalities, to a high of 131 mills in the Southeastern Greene District, which includes Greensboro.

The Carmichaels Area District has a 97-mill levy; Jefferson-Morgan a 114-mill tax, and Central Greene a 78-mill levy.

The reason for the difference lies in the range of the assessed value of property within the school district, and this in turn is greatly influenced by the amount of coal which each has — a taxable mineral which eases the burden on home owners.

In the West Greene District, for example, taxable property carries total assessed value of $47.2 million, with 70 percent of it being coal. Each mill of school tax brings in $47,200 to help finance a 1985-86 school operating budget of $5.1 million. The district has 1,325 students.

The Southeastern Greene District, with 1,095 students has a far lower budget of $3.9 million which it must finance by taxing property assessed at $12.6 million, of which 30 percent is coal. Each mill of tax there brings in $12,600.

The Carmichaels Area District, with 1,442 students, and Jefferson-Morgan District, with 1,253 students, are comparable in size, with tax bases of $18.6 million and $17.9 million, respectively.

In the Carmichaels Area District, 13 percent of the tax base is coal and in the Jefferson-Morgan District coal makes up 29.8 percent of the tax base. They have 1985-86 operating budgets of $4.4 million in Carmichaels Area and $4.8 million in Jefferson-Morgan.

The Central Greene School District has the largest assessed valuation of any district in the county at $2.6 billion, of which 53.4 percent is coal. But it is also by far the largest district in the county with 2,714 students and in terms of the amount of expenditures ($10.4 million) it has budgeted for this year.

As to the future, coal which remains in the eastern part of the county continues to be depleted each year through active mining operations, further eroding the tax base, while that in the western section is still virtually untapped and remains a stable factor in the tax base.

The accompanying chart shows the current total of the assessed valuation of taxable land, buildings and coal for each municipality, as well as the combined county, municipal and school property tax levies for each.

Firemen Put Together Reward Fund

MARIANNA — Prompted by their concern over the number of documented arson or attempted arson cases in the area during the last two years, members of the Marianna Volunteer Fire Co. are taking a stand.

The company is in the process of putting together a reward fund for capture and conviction of those responsible for more than 20 different incidents.

During this time period, at least 10 barns, primarily in the West Bethlehem Township and Marianna Borough area were either destroyed or damaged. Several sheds and homes also either burned to the ground or sustained fire damage. Other arson cases that the borough firemen have recorded include fires in North Bethlehem Township, Demston and Washington Township in Greene County. All of the cases have been labeled arson by the state police fire marshal.

"We started talking about this two weeks ago," said company member and Marianna businessman E. Richard Nichol.

The firemen have formed a committee and are in the process of putting together pledge cards, which will come into effect when the arsonist is found and sentenced. Nichol said the amount of the reward has not been determined.

Homecoming, Visitation Tomorrow

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College will celebrate its annual homecoming Saturday, Oct. 19, with the traditional homecoming parade being followed by a football game against the Westminster Titans.

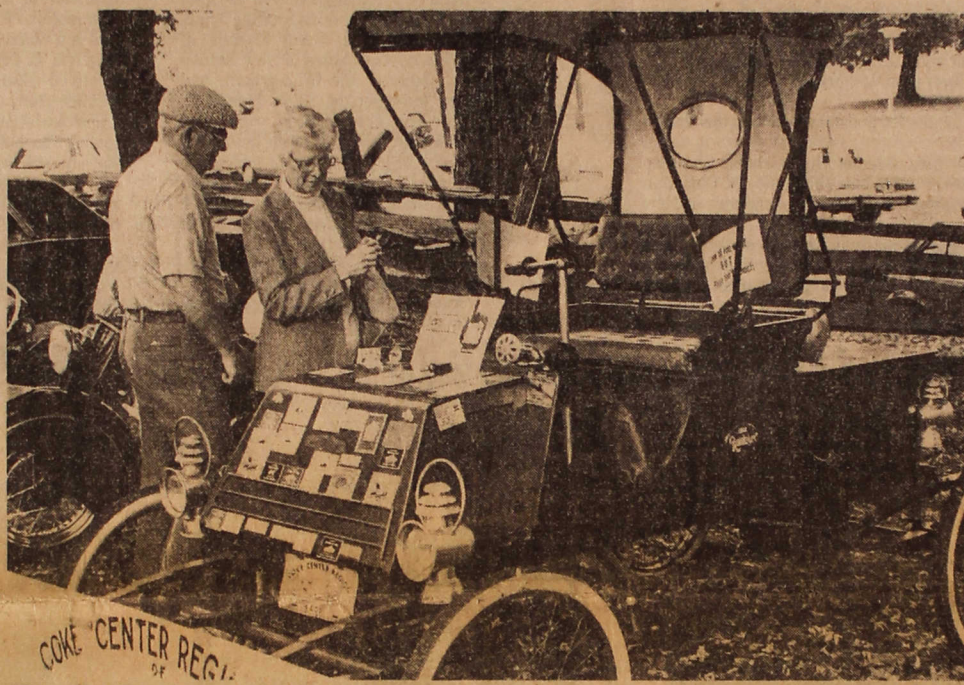

The event is being combined with the annual Fall Visitation Day program at which prospective students and their parents are given an opportunity to visit the campus, have lunch, and attend the football game.

Pittsburgh television news personality Lynn Cullen has been selected as marshal for this year's homecoming parade.

The parade is scheduled to begin at 11:45 a.m. with line-up on West Street. It will move east on High Street to Morgan Street, south on Morgan to Lincoln Street, and then east on Lincoln to College Field.

The parade will include marching bands, drum and bugle corps, clowns, floats made by college organizations and local groups, and several campus and community groups.

Dr. J. Thomas Mills Jr., president of the college, has invited residents of the community to join members of the college family in marching in the parade, which is sponsored by Student Senate.

Fall Festival Enjoyed

As it has been for many years, the Fall Festival at the Greene County Historical Society last weekend was a showcase happening that attracted a large number of spectators. One of the attractions, a 1902 Rambler, is admired by Harry and Betty Johnson, Garards Fort.

Waynesburg May Charge Out-Of-Town Businessmen

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg Borough Council will explore the feasibility of establishing a permit system for contractors, craftsmen and tradespeople who come into the borough to do business.

Councilmen Kenneth Fox and Frank VanCleve were appointed to check with other municipalities in the area to see what kind of ordinances they have, if any, which require such permits and the schedule of fees they charge for issuing them.

Fox raised the issue, stating he was doing so because a local plumber had pointed out to him that he had to pay the borough's annual $125 business privilege tax while other plumbers who do work in the borough are not subject to it because their businesses are headquartered outside Waynesburg.

"We're not talking about amending the business privilege tax ordinance to include out-of-town tradespeople, but the man did have a point," Fox said. "I understand that many communities do require permits and charge a fee for them when contractors, roofers, carpenters and similar people come into their municipalities to do work. It might not prove feasible, but I feel we should look into it."

Other members of council agreed, noting that no action will be taken until both the legality and the practicality of such a system has been thoroughly considered.

In action at the meeting, council approved a Franklin Street access for the proposed Domino's pizza outlet at the corner of Morris and Franklin streets.

It was noted that the borough planning commission, at a recent meeting, had approved revised plans for the pizza shop.

Debra Ann Martin of Waynesburg was hired by council as parking meter agent, effective immediately, at a wage of $4 an hour for the part-time job. The position has been vacant for several months.

Councilman Lonnie Dusenberry reported there is renewed interest among residents of the North Side in the establishment of a Neighborhood Watch program.

He said that anyone interested in setting up such a program in the borough contact either him or Police Chief Tim Hawfield. "It's something which is definitely in the best interest of the community, but something that will work only if people want it to work," he said.

It was announced that borough maintenance people will pick up leaves for people who want the service, making collections on a once-a-week basis. The leaves must be packed into plastic bags which are tied and left at the front of the house.

Trick-or-trick night in the borough is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 31. Halloween visitors will be permitted to visit homes where the porch light is lighted between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. The annual Halloween parade sponsored by the Waynesburg Lions Club will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24.

Council voted to end the street-sweeping schedule on Oct. 31. Parking regulations requiring cars to be off the streets when they are to be swept will no longer be enforced after that date.

Council authorized the Southwestern Pennsylvania Water Authority to write off long-defunct unpaid borough sewerage bills, some of them dating back to the 1960s. The authority collects the borough sewerage fee.

Sections of two closed streets were vacated on petition of the owners of property abutting them. Those closed were 100 feet of Blackberry Alley between Second Avenue and Third Alley, and 160 feet of Ross Street between Fifth Avenue and Hillcrest Street. Both are on the North Side.

Council awarded two additional contracts for home renovations to be done under the Small Communities grant, based on bids received by Marion Chambers, administrator of the grant program. They went to Weathertight Inc. on a bid of $9,781 and to the Lonnie Willison Construction Co. on a bid of $11,796. Action on a third project was tabled until a special meeting to be held on Oct. 28.

Chambers reported that of the $312,450 in grant monies assigned to the project, $23,058 has been spent to date. Four projects have been completed, six more are underway, and eight other applications are currently being considered.

Council also approved several changes in program guidelines which Chambers said had been recommended by the Department of Community Affairs.

The resignation of Stephen Lauer as chairman of the zoning hearing board was accepted "with regret," with council expressing its appreciation for his service on the borough.

Tax Exemption Issue On Ballot

Wilma Moninger, Greene County director of veteran affairs, is urging county residents to vote "yes" on a proposed constitutional amendment which would extend property tax exemptions to the widows of veterans who received the exemption due to 100 percent disability.

The amendment, listed on the ballot for the Nov. 5 election as "Joint Resolution No. 2," reads:

"Shall Article VIII, Section 2(c) of the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to provide that an unmarried surviving spouse upon the death of a veteran who as a result of military service was blind, paraplegic, a double or quadruple amputee, or had 100 percent permanent disability be exempt from payment of all real property taxes upon their residence provided that the State Veterans' Commission determines that such spouse is in need of an exemption?"

Miss Moninger explained that the exemption from payment of property taxes applies to only the residence of the disabled veteran and is granted only after the State Veterans' Commission has determined that there is a financial need for the exemption.

"The exemption now dies with the veteran," Miss Moninger said. "We are asking that the spouse continue to receive the exemption as long as she remains unmarried and it is determined that there is a financial need for it."

Central Greene Arranges Transportation For Students

By Bob Niedbala, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The Central Greene School Board voted Monday, Oct. 14, to make arrangements to provide transportation for several students in the district who have special needs.

The board voted to enter a contract with Central Cab Co. for a van to transport two handicapped children, who recently moved to a house on Route 663 in Washington Township, and several other students along this route, to their respective schools at a cost of $83 a day.

The students live about 1.2 miles from the nearest bus stop and because of their handicaps are unable to walk to the stop. It was noted that administrators had investigated the possibility of having the children picked up by an Intermediate Unit bus, but none of the I.U. buses passed through the area. Homebound instruction had also been considered but rejected on recommendations from the children's doctors.

The board also approved transportation contracts with the parents of two children who will attend the elementary gifted program at the East Ward Elementary School one day a week. One student currently attends Spraggs Elementary and the other Whiteley Elementary.

The parents will drive their children to school on Mondays and the students will take a regular school bus home. The total cost to the district will be $12.25 a week.

To provide transportation for a student to a special education program at Whiteley School, the board voted to extend Charles Bower's van route, No. 405, six mile a day. Cost of the additional transportation will be $4.98 a day.

The board voted to accept Heather Yurt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Yurt of Graysville, as a tuition student at Waynesburg Central High School.

It was noted that Miss Yurt lived in Waynesburg and attended ninth grade at Waynesburg Central during the 1984-85 school year. Although she moved to Graysville, which is in the West Greene School District attendance area, she wishes to continue her schooling at Waynesburg Central.

According to business manager Walter Stout, this is the first student that the district has received in this manner. Stout said the cost of tuition is about $2,300 a year.

In other business, the board: Decided to change the date of its November meeting to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12, a week earlier than normal, because of the open house which will be held the third week in November during American Education Week.

Awarded the bid for a water storage tank for Spraggs Elementary to Greene Mechanical Corp. of Carmichaels.

Rates For Refuse Collection Drop In Franklin Township

WAYNESBURG — In view of the fact that Waynesburg Borough was given a reduction in refuse collection rates recently, Long Trucking Company will also reduce rates in Franklin Township.

Long, which has the contract in both municipalities, made the announcement at a meeting of the Franklin Township Supervisors.

The collection firm will reduce rates from $18 per quarter to $15 per quarter beginning Dec. 1.

A reduction in rates was made possible recently when Waynesburg Borough promised promised Long Trucking to make refuse collection mandatory for home owners. However, the township has no plans to police residential customers.

In other action, the township voted to prohibit trick-or-treating and instead announced the township recreation board would make a cash donation to the Waynesburg Lions Club which sponsors a Halloween parade.

A lot-split request from Colleen and Thomas Mering Jr. was approved. The request involves a mobile home site withheld from a land sale recently.

It was announced that specifications for a traffic signal at the intersection of Elm Drive and Route 21 have been completed and bids will soon be sought for the project.

ENGAGED — The engagement of Diane Marie Goff, daughter of Margaret Goff of Spraggs R.D.1 and the late Loren Goff, and Joseph Ray Jacobs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Jacobs of Holbrook R.D.1, has been announced by the bride-elect's mother. Miss Goff will graduate from Waynesburg Central High School in 1986. Her fiance is a 1984 graduate of West Greene High School and attended Waynesburg College for one year. He has joined the Army and will leave Jan. 15, 1986, for basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., after which he will be assigned to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for training as a computer machine operator. Wedding plans are incomplete.

DAUGHTER BORN

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jordan Jr. are announcing the birth of their first child and daughter on Sept. 26, 1985 at Elgin Air Force Base Hospital in Florida. The baby has been named Ashley Marie. Mrs. Jordan is the former Merribeth Gopen, daughter of George and Dolly Gopen of Bobtown. Paternal grandparents are Wayne and Bonnie Jordan of Greensboro. Great-grandparents are Mrs. Ann Mathews of Dilliner, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall of Morgantown, W.Va. and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jordan Sr. of Headlee Heights. Mrs. Debbie Sharp of New Geneva is the baby's great-great-grandmother.

Patricia Ross Is Bride Of Daniel W. Brennan

The Jefferson United Methodist Church was the setting for the September 28, 1985, ceremony that united in marriage Patricia Marie Ross and Daniel Walter Brennan. The Rev. George Shultzabarger officiated the 2 p.m., double-ring ceremony, with Mrs. Ben L. Parker as organist and Jay Hitt as soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Ray and Erma Jane Ross of Carmichaels R.D.1 (Khedive). Parents of the bridegroom are Charles and Johanna Brennan of St. Charles, Md.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown fashioned by her mother. It featured an empire waist, A-line satin sheath, fitted overblouse, sleeves of lace reaching to the elbow, and a sculptured neckline. The full bishop chiffon sleeves ended at the wrist with pointed satin and lace cuffs. The chiffon skirt was fully pleated across the back. Her fingertip-length veil was held by a lace and satin flower, trimmed with seed pearls and sequins. The veil and satin sheath skirt were trimmed with matching lace.

Bernice Merchant of Pittsburgh served as matron of honor. She wore an empire style pastel green gown and carried a large nosegay of pastel silk flowers. Flower girls were Jennifer Brennan, daughter of the bridegroom, and April Hamlin, niece of the bride. They wore gowns of pastel blue and lavender.

Charles Brennan Jr. of St. Charles, Md. served as best man. Ushers were William Brennan, brother of the bridegroom, Wade Hamlin, brother-in-law of the bride, and Douglas Jewell, uncle of the bride. Evan Brennan, son of the bridegroom, was the ring-

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the social room of the church. Amy, Diane, Susan and Laura Hewell assisted the ladies of the church in serving.

The bride is a 1968 graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School and a 1970 graduate of Duff's Business Institute of Pittsburgh. She is employed by Edgewood Management Co. of Bethesda, Md.

The bridegroom is a 1966 graduate of Baltimore City College and a 1972 graduate of Towson State College. He is employed as data processing manager with Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will reside in St. Charles, Md.

Miles, Lemley Married

The First Church of the Nazarene in Waynesburg was the setting for the September 21 ceremony that united in marriage Jeffrey Scott Miles and Paula Jean Lemley. The Rev. Dale Salico of Clarion officiated the 3:30 p.m., double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Lemley of Waynesburg R.D.4. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Miles of New Bethlehem R.D.3.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a white satin formal-length gown, with a high neckline of illusion netting. The gown had a fitted bodice trimmed with pearls and Alencon lace and long pointed sleeves. A full skirt fell from the natural waistline and was edged with Alencon lace. Her headpiece was a semi-juliet cap of Alencon lace and pearls, with a finger-tip-length veil edged in pearls. Her chapel-length train was edged in Alencon lace.

She wore a cross necklace and pearl earrings, borrowed from the maid of honor. A white handkerchief made by her late paternal grandmother was something old. A white handkerchief, a gift from the bridegroom's mother, was something new. She had a sixpence in her shoe.

She carried a cascading arrangement of white miniature roses, miniature carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath, with trailing ivy and streamers of white ribbon.

Lisa Diemert of Pittsburgh was the matron of honor, while Amy McDonald of Pittsburgh served as maid of honor. Both are friends of the bride. Bridesmaids were Beth Troxell of Leighton, Amy Miles of New Bethlehem, sister of the bridegroom, and Susan Morrison of South Hamilton, Mass. The bridesmaids wore blue floor-length gowns of satin jacquard.

Jody Miles of Indiana serves as best man for his brother. Ushers were Ralph Small of Corsica, Steve Minich of Summerville, James Lemley of Downingtown, brother of the bride, and Rodney Lemley of Arlington, Texas, brother of the bride.

The organist for the ceremony was

MRS. MILES

Artie Williams of Clarion. Soloists were Phyllis Kantenwein of Warsaw, Ind., and Lora Humble of Waynesburg.

Following the ceremony, a reception for 225 guests was held at the Waynesburg Elks Lodge. The reception was catered by the Ladies of the Elks. The wedding cake was baked by Mabel Miller of New Freeport. The guest book was attended by Krista Headley of Waynesburg, cousin of the bride, and programs distributed by Douglas Lemley of Downingtown, nephew of the bride.

The new Mrs. Miles received a bachelor of science degree in communications from Clarion University. She is a video specialist with General Electric in Pittsburgh. Her husband received a bachelor of arts degree in finance from Clarion University and is an assistant director for the Regional Computer Resource Center at the university.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside at Fairmount City R.D.1.

Out-of-town wedding guests were from Texas, Indiana, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine and Ohio.

COMPLETES TRAINING — U.S. Navy Airman William E. Snyder, son of William G. and Ruth A. Snyder of Coraopolis, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego, Calif. During the eight-week training program, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training. A 1984 graduate of Montour High School, Snyder is the grandson of William and Ruth Snyder, and Helen Grim of Jefferson. He joined the Navy in May 1985.

COMPLETES COURSE

Army Private Linda E. Whipkey, daughter of Fay K. Whipkey of Brave, has completed an Army automatic data processing machine operator course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. She is a 1983 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School.

COMPLETES TRAINING

Army National Guard Pvt. Timothy G. VanHorn, son of Carl and Helen M. VanHorn of Waynesburg R.D.4, has completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga. OSUT is a 12-week program which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training. VanHorn is a 1985 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School.

State Organization Gives Donations

Women Encouraged To Run For Office

WAYNESBURG — A state-wide organization, designed to encourage women to seek elected offices, this week gave its first donation to a woman running for office in Greene County.

Genevieve Morrow, coordinator of the Political Action Committee in Greene County, and Linda Rizer, president of the Greene County Women's Democrat Club, presented a donation to Shirley Stockdale for her campaign as Clerk of Courts of Greene County.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Democratic Women's Clubs, established the Political Action Committee (P.A.C.) in 1978 for the sole purpose of helping Democratic women achieve elected offices.

Recognizing that a lack of adequate campaign funds has long been a major problem for women candidates, the P.A.C. makes financial donations to women legislative candidates and to Federation members seeking important offices.

In addition, each year the P.A.C. holds workshops designed to give present and future women candidates the necessary campaign techniques and political skills to win elections.

The hope of the Democratic Women's Clubs is that such support will encourage more women to run for office, in both local and state government.

Federal Funds Are Allocated To Local College

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College will receive $157,597 in federal funds under the Title III program, money which the college intends to apply to the Bachelor of Science Nursing Program and the Computerized Management Information System.

To date, the college has received more than $1.3 million from the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Post Secondary Education, during the four years of the five-year program.

The money has been used to start-up the Masters of Business Administrative program, the developmental skills program for mathematics and reading, computer assisted laboratory — science instructional program, experimental learning internships and the visual communications arts program.

Swim Program Under Way

WAYNESBURG — The public swimming program at Waynesburg Central High School will run through May 30, 1986.

Betty Walker, water safety instructor, will be in charge of the program again this year.

Open sessions will be held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sundays and from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Tuesday and Friday evenings will be reserved for special programs to be conducted by Miss Walker.

Commissioners Learn They Must Advertise Bridge Inspection Work

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners have run into a snag in connection with action they took recently to hire Manolah Basing Engineers of Uniontown to inspect 88 county bridges that have a span of 21 feet or more.

PennDOT officials have told the commissioners that federal highway aid regulations require that the commissioners publicize their intention to contract for engineering services before a contract can be awarded.

As a result, the commissioners scheduled a special meeting to authorize Chief Clerk Herbert Cox to advertise for engineering services in connection with the bridge study.

Federal regulations require that the inspections be conducted every two years, with the federal government and the county dividing the cost on an 80-20 basis.

The commissioners said they selected the Uniontown firm because its price of $60,000 was the lowest proposal they received. It would obligate the county to an expenditure of $12,000.

The motion to hire the Uniontown firm was made with the stipulation that the company's qualifications meet requirements of the federal legislation.

"The company is already doing bridge inspection work in several other counties, so we foresaw no difficulty," Commissioner L.R. Santore said. "But it now appears that we have to go back and start over again, even though it might make it much more difficult to have the study completed by the end of the year, which the state is requiring."

Farm, Home Notes

Autumn Is Best Time For Liming Garden Soil

Farmers and gardeners alike should consider fall liming to prepare for the next growing season.

Applying lime according to soil test recommendations is a sound management practice. Lime neutralizes excessive acidity in the soil and supplies calcium and/or magnesium which are necessary for plant growth.

What's wrong with having acid soil?

Elements such as nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are less available to the plant so some of fertilizer dollars are wasted when applied to acid soils. Acid soils are usually deficient in calcium and magnesium.

Some minor elements such as aluminum become more available and may be toxic to plants. Some herbicides such as the triazines will not work well in acid soils.

Vegetable and fruit crops differ in their sensitivity to acid soils. Potatoes and blueberries like acid soils with a pH of 4.8 to 5.4. Beans, cole crops, vine crops, tomatoes, sweet corn, strawberries and fruit trees will grow well in moderately acid soils with a pH of 5.8 to 6.8. Onions, leafy vegetables, root crops and asparagus prefer neutral soils with a pH of 6.0 to 6.8.

Lime is typically in three forms: Calcitic, Dolomitic and Hydrated. Calcitic lime should generally be used where soil pH and calcium are low and magnesium is high.

Dolomitic lime should be used where magnesium is particularly low.

Hydrated lime is made by adding water to burned lime. It reacts most rapidly with the soil but the effect may be temporary. Hydrated lime is caustic and improper application will burn plants.

To make lime react rapidly in the soil, use only fine-ground lime. Small particles react much faster than coarse particles. Disc or harrow lime in fields that are tilled.

Plowing is not a good way to mix lime. Applying lime to dry soil will help prevent caking and improve mixing. Fall applications allow several months for the lime to react with the soil making needed nutrients more available to plants when they are needed.

Spreading lime is also easier in the fall when soil moisture is low and spreading equipment can more easily move over fields.

Four Churches To Celebrate Homecoming

KIRBY — Members of the four churches which make up the Fairall Charge of the United Methodist Church will join Sunday, Oct. 20, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Kirby Church.

The centennial homecoming will be highlighted by worship service at 11 a.m., a covered dish dinner at 12:15 p.m., and an afternoon worship service at 2 p.m.

The Rev. Robert Lash, Washington District superintendent, will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service. His topic will be "Charges Against the Church." The Fairall Charge choir will present the anthem.

The Rev. Norman Young will preach at the 2 p.m. service and the Fairall Charge choir will again sing.

Four former pastors, Merle Jay, Norman Young, David Lindberg and Kathy Kosanovich Higgins are planning to attend.

Because of the special service at Kirby, there will be no worship services on Sunday at the other three churches on the charge, but Sunday school will be held.

Sunday school at the Kirby Church will be held at 10 a.m. At the Cloughton Chapel Church classes will be held at the usual hour of 9 a.m. Classes at the Valley Chapel Church will be held at 9 a.m., an hour earlier than usual, and at the Fairall Church they will be held at 9:30 a.m., a half hour earlier than usual.

The Rev. David J. Hackenberg is charge pastor.

PennDOT Sets 10-Ton Weight Limits On Seven Roadways

WAYNESBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation has announced the placing of 10-ton weight limits on sections of seven legislative roads in western Greene County, which recently were resurfaced.

A PennDOT spokesman said the weight limits became effective on Oct. 14 as a precautionary measure to enable the department to require bonds when heavy haulers use the roads.

The roads: Route 30007 from Route 30001 to Route 18 in Springhill Township, near Ned.

Route 30087, from the intersection with Route 30065 to the intersection with Route 30039 in Aleppo and Richhill Townships, near Bristoria.

Route 30065 from the intersection with Route 30004 to the intersection with Route 30087 in Aleppo Township.

Route 30111 in Aleppo Township from the intersection with Route 30004 to the Springhill Township line.

Route 30029 in Center and Morris Townships, from the intersection with Route 21 to the intersection with Route 18.

Route 30001 in Richhill Township from the intersection with Route 21 to the Washington County line.

Route 30039 in Richhill Township, from the intersection with Route 21 to the intersection with Route 30003 near Bristoria.

Officers Elected

Dunkard Township Grange elected officers at a recent meeting.

The following officers were elected: Sara Yost, master; Charles Ross, overseer; Jane Abel, lecturer; Alice McFarland, steward; Gene Yost, assistant steward; Mary Lou Yost, lady assistant steward; Zelda Kozar, chaplain; Nell Queen, treasurer; James Abel, secretary; George Haines, gatekeeper; Pearl Ullery, Ceres; Debby Jackson, Pomona; Lawrence McClure, executive committee (three years); and Wayne Tanner, finance committee (two years).

Grange Names Citizen Of Year

CARMICHAELS — Ira H. Brown of Carmichaels was honored as "Community Citizen of the Year" by the Carmichaels Grange at its meeting recently.

Brown was recognized for his many contributions to the community, including his work for the Greene Academy of Art and local Rotary Club. He was introduced to the grange by member Ewing Miller, who noted Brown has always been willing to help a friend or neighbor.

Brown was born the youngest of three sons to Harvey and May Rice Brown. He is a 1936 graduate of Waynesburg College and, for many years, operated the Brown Poultry Farm in Garards Fort.

In 1957 he combined his farm work with teaching and taught for many years in Benjamin Franklin Junior High School, Uniontown.

A member and treasurer of the John Corby Baptist Church, he also served as a school director and a member of the Carmichaels Rotary Club, with perfect attendance.

He has traveled extensively and taken family trips through all 50 states, Canada and much of Mexico. In 1968 and 1971 he drove through much of Europe and met with his daughter, Lois, and family in Africa. In 1975 he took an extended tour of South America and, the next year, toured the South Pacific, including Australia and New Zealand. He documented his travels in film and has often been a guest at club meetings to show his slides.

Since his retirement, Brown has devoted much of his energies to the Greene Academy of Art, where he serves as treasurer. He organized paint crews to paint the building's interior and made a slideshow record of the academy's restoration. He continues to work in the building almost every day.

He has three children, Mona Quint, Lois Bennett and Dick Brown, and is married to the former Charlotte McMinn of Carmichaels.

Also during the grange meeting, 50-year membership pins and certificates were awarded to Opal Murphy and Margaret Randolph. Twenty-five year members Mr. and Mrs. George Beal also were recognized. A fourth degree pin was given to Tracey Rumble.

A Junior Award was presented to Kyra Talpas from the Millers Run Grange in Washington County, for her dance performance. She is the granddaughter of grange member Audrey Mundell.

A Youth Award was presented to Pamela Kerr, granddaughter of Robert Schneider. She is the 1984 Wool Queen.

Special music was provided by soloist Gene Miller.

The grange's charter was draped in memory of Paul Lesako.

Mine Subsidence Is Called Risk At Proposed Treatment Plant Site

By Bob Niedbala, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — The Lower Ten Mile Joint has learned that there may be a problem with mine subsidence at the site of the treatment plant proposed for the Williamstown area.

Authority engineer John Schaudé told the authority that five core borings had been drilled at the site, which is located at an abandoned mine dump south of the village. Through the borings it was determined that there is about 55 feet of overburden there.

The engineer who did the tests categorized the thickness of overburden over the abandoned mine as falling into a "high risk of mine subsidence," said Schaudé, who added that he believed "the only other category above that is very high (risk)."

The type of treatment plant that is to be built at the site is an aerated lagoon. Schaudé said he recommends using this type of plant because it will cost less to operate than a regular package type plant, which uses concrete holding tanks to treat the sewage.

The lagoon would be about the size of two football fields and have a liner, which Schaudé said could be laid to compensate for any subsidence. He said the authority also could consider filling the mine with fly ash.

Authority member Jack Buskirk questioned Schaudé about insuring the plant, which to replace was estimated to cost about $250,000. He said it might be better to determine how much it would cost to fill the abandoned mine with fly ash and compare it with the replacement cost.

Schaudé said he will prepare an estimate on the cost of filling in the mine and see if the work can be covered under the authority's federal grant. The authority also decided to see if the plant can be covered by subsidence insurance.

The authority plans to build a second plant, which is a package plant, at a site about 4,000 feet downstream from the Mather-Jefferson Borough Bridge.

In other business, the authority listened to proposals from two local real estate appraisers concerning rights of way acquisitions. Authority members felt they could save money by using a local resident to obtain the rights-of-way instead of hiring a professional to do the job.

The authority decided to interview investment banking firms, which will be selling about $6.3 million of bonds that the authority intends to issue to construct its system.

The authority hired Schaudé and his firm, Betz, Converse and Murdock Inc., to prepare a sewer use ordinance and a system for charging various customers at a cost not to exceed $5,000. It was explained that separate rates must be devised for the commercial, industrial and residential customers. The cost to each customer per month will not be determined until later.

Coal Assessment Change Needed To Equalize Taxes

A compilation of real estate taxes in Greene County's 26 municipalities, which was prepared by the Pennsylvania Economy League, points up the great disparity in the amount of property taxes which residents must pay to educate their children.

It amounts to $131 for each $1,000 of assessed value in the Southeastern Greene School District, $114 in the Jefferson-Morgan District, $97 in the Carmichaels Area District, $78 in the Central Greene District and $54 in the West Greene District.

Paradoxically, the Southeastern Greene and West Greene Districts, which are at the extremes in terms of tax burden, have a difference of only 300 students in their schools. And while its residents pay twice as much in school taxes, the Southeastern Greene District's 1985-86 budget of $3.9 million is $1.2 million lower than West Greene's budget.

The answer lies in the size of the tax base. Southeastern Greene must finance its operation by taxing property with a total assessed value of $12.6 million, getting some $12,000 for each mill of tax it levies. West Greene, on the other hand, draws from a total assessment of $47.2 million and gets about $47,000 from each mill of tax.

A home owner in West Greene gets his break because most of the county's coal reserves are in that district, and coal companies carry close to 70 percent of the tax load.

Much of the coal in municipalities which make up the Southeastern Greene District has been mined out, and coal owners there bear less than 20 percent of the tax burden. Home owners must make up the difference.

While it is not always accurate to judge the quality of an educational program by the affluence of the school district, it is obvious that the Southeastern Greene District cannot afford all of the programs which a richer district might enjoy. There is a limit to the amount of taxes which property owners can bear.

One of the answers that has been proposed from time to time is to merge Greene County's five school districts into one district, thus equalizing both the tax load and the educational program.

But until something is done to set up a coal assessment program which does not favor one part of the county over another, if it can be done within limits of the property tax law, there is little likelihood that residents who benefit from the disparity will be willing to give up their tax advantage to help their less fortunate neighbors.

LETTERBOX

Should Join The Fight

Before the Greene County commissioners "relieve the county of the financial burden of the Curry Memorial Home," (as one article commented) by selling the nursing home to private interests, they had better consider the following issues carefully.

Private operators are in the nursing home business for one reason: To make a profit. We should never forget why counties established shelters for the aged, the infirm and the indigent in the first place. The needy were abandoned by other sectors of society. Isn't that, in fact, one of the best uses for our tax dollars?

How do private operators profit from nursing homes? Better management? Maybe. But more likely by squeezing the work force — cutting corners on food and supplies, skimming on staffing and patient care. The only problem is that people suffer.

Will the commissioners be penny wise and pound foolish? A favorite ploy of private contractors is to get a foot in the door through artificially low bids. Then, after a couple of years, look out. Their costs suddenly escalate once they're in control.

Have the commissioners done a thorough cost analysis of any possible divestiture? Can they really get a fair return on taxpayers' investment in land, building and equipment? Or would lease or sale simply mean another giveaway of public tax dollars to special private interests? What about costs associated with job loss such as unemployment insurance, lost tax revenues, etc.? Can they afford to put 150 employees out in the street?

If revenue shortfall for operation of the home is a result of cutbacks in federal and state reimbursements, let's point the finger at the real target — Ronald Reagan, Dick Thornburgh, and week-kneed lawmakers.

We're ready to petition and demonstrate against these wrongheaded governmental priorities. And the commissioners should join the fight, not throw in the towel.

Volunteers Commended

Sean Lohr, a West Greene High School football player, recently suffered a potentially serious spinal cord injury during practice. Waynesburg Volunteer Fire Company members Robin Roberts and Bobby Rice responded to the ambulance call. Sean was treated before and during transport to Greene County Memorial Hospital and later flown by Life Flight to Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh.

A letter was received by Mr. Roberts and the fire company from Dr. Kenneth Casey, MD, chief neurosurgical resident at Children's Hospital, commending Mr. Roberts and Mr. Rice for their excellent work in attending Sean. It said, in part:

"We applaud your efforts. In particular, the description of the injury indicating a spinal cord injury was handled superbly, and the fact that the helmet was left in place during transport and other appropriate precautions were taken.

"It is comforting to know that area emergency medical services are performing to such standards.

"You will be pleased to know that Sean's examination upon arrival at Children's Hospital was entirely unremarkable, suggesting that the contusion of the spinal cord will not be a significant or a long-lasting one. "Once again, congratulations to your excellent effort in this child's regard."

Everyone in the area served by the Waynesburg Volunteer Fire Company and its ambulance service, as well as those served in other communities by equally dedicated volunteers, owes much to these people. They are skilled and are deeply concerned for those they serve in emergency situations.

The Sean Lohr case is only one of many where more serious injuries or life-threatening situations were avoided because of the quick response and know-how of these volunteers from all communities.

between the bookends

by Marcia McKenna Biddle

Somebody was recently complaining to me that nursery rhymes are too gory, if not downright gruesome, to read to little children. For instance, when singing "Rock-a-bye Baby" to infants, why do we plant the idea of dropping them, by chance, on their little heads?

One theory about the rhyme says that it tells of "the long and exciting history of James Stuart, the Pretender..." is you want to look up your English history.

In "The Annotated Moose Goose," a book published in 1960 by William and Cecil Baring-Gould, the authors describe nursery rhymes as having three characteristics — they are part of a long oral tradition, they are usually short, and they are really just rhymes "intended to lull an infant or amuse a somewhat older child."

Still, some interesting legends have grown up around many of the old rhymes. "The Old Woman Who Lived in the Shoe," may have referred, the authors say, to "Elizabeth Goose of Boston, her ten stepchildren, her six children by Isaac Goose, and her (at least) seven grandchildren. But the jingle is far older than that. "Some scholars hold that Parliament was the old woman, who geographically lived in a 'shoes' which was the British Isles, ruling the many 'children' of the then far-flung Empire 'upon whom the sun never sets.'"

These ideas of course are far too boring to inflict on children, who would not sit still for theorizing, anyway, and would prefer, at the age most are when introduced to their nursery rhymes, to be tearing their magazines into small pieces, or shredding the day's newspaper. At least, that seems to be one of their ideas of fun.

As for Little Jack Horner, he may have been Thomas Horner, "Steward to Richard Whiting, last of the abbots of Glastonburg Cathedral."

"At the time of the Dissolution, when Henry VIII was taking over all the Church property he could get his royal hands on, the abbot is said to have sent his steward to London with a Christmas gift intended to appease the king, a pie in which were hidden the deeds to 12 manorial estates. On the journey, Thomas Horner is alleged to have opened the pie and extracted one deed — that to the fine manor of Mells. There his descendants live to this day. As for Abbot Whiting, he was tired (with Thomas Horner sitting on the jury), found guilty of having secreted gold sacramental cups from the profane touch of the king, and consequently hanged, beheaded, and quartered."

One theory states that "Ring Around the Rosie" refers to the Great

Plague. "Rosie refers to the rosy reach of plague, ringed to signify the tokens; the posies were herbs and spices carried to sweeten the air; sneezing was a common symptom of those close to death, and 'all fall down' was in a way exactly what happened."

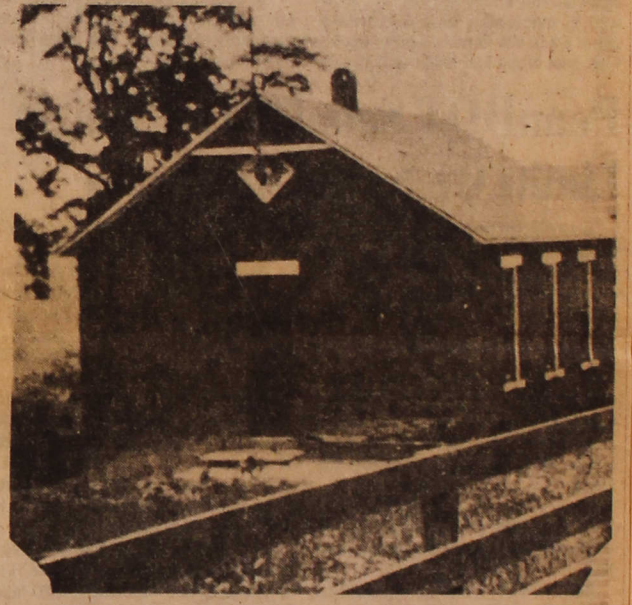

To some people, Little Miss Muffet was Mary Queen of Scots, and the big spider was John Knox. One writer said, "Denouncing the frivolous 'Little Miss Muffet' from the pulpit of St. Giles until the ecclesiastical atmosphere was blue and sulphurous, the 'big spider' with angry brow and darkling mien strode down the Cannongate. Turning sharply to the right, he quickened his pace to enter Holyrood and sitting beside her, demanded her recantation."

All this speculation is interesting, but none of the infants I have known ever cared a thing about any of it.

Jackets Stuffed In Loss To Frostburg

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

FROSTBURG, Md. — The frustration boiled on Waynesburg College's sideline Saturday afternoon, Oct. 12, some 2,800 feet above sea level at Bobcat Stadium in Frostburg.

While Waynesburg's defense played brilliantly, it was the fourth time in five games the team's offense did a disappearing act.

The Yellow Jackets mounted just one decent drive, managed only nine first downs and didn't score against Frostburg State in a discouraging 12-0 loss.

"We were unable to move the football on the ground and that led to troubles," Waynesburg head coach Bill Tornabene said softly. "If you can't run you have trouble with most everything you try."

Nearly everything Waynesburg tried didn't work against Frostburg. The Yellow Jackets gained 95 total yards on offense and never penetrated the Bobcats' 22 yard line.

"I think when you're not able to move the ball, obviously the blocking needs work," Tornabene said. "We've been working hard on it and we will work even harder."

It seems ironic that Tornabene is facing such problems considering his team's record in still 3-2. But he knows his defense is the main reason the Jackets won two of those games.

Against West Liberty in a 10-7 win, the Jackets' defense stuffed the Hill-toppers and set up the winning touchdown drive. Then one week later against Glenville State the defense blocked a punt and scored the game's only TD in a 7-2 win. The only game Waynesburg's offense did much was in a 26-6 win over Duquesne.

Unfortunately for Waynesburg, things went sour again Saturday. Starting quarterback Jim Bozek played poorly in his second start, completing 13 of 34 passes for 104 yards and two interceptions. The freshman Bozek rarely had time to set up and was sacked for losses totaling 54 yards.

Meanwhile, Waynesburg self-destructed twice on fumbles to end drives while the game was still close. One came when tight end Dave Zilli caught a pass from Bozek on Frostburg's 24 yard line then lost the ball to the Bobcats' Ray Burton.

Seconds later, after Bob Abbiatici made one of his three interceptions against Frostburg quarterback Ed Froehlich, Brian Brusoski had the ball stripped by Bobcat defensive lineman Bill Nolan. The Jackets were at Frostburg's 24.

"We made turnovers twice deep in their territory and we tell the kids we can't do that down in deep," Tornabene said. "We had a throw dropped and a runner stripped and I believe you can't have three interceptions and two turnovers and win." Don't tell that to Frostburg, though. The Bobcats improved their record to 4-2 despite six interceptions and one fumble. Besides Abbiatici, Pete Butler had two interceptions and Tyrone Tomblin one for Waynesburg.

But Froehlich, Frostburg's third-string quarterback who became a starter because of injuries to players ahead of him, completed 17 of 38 passes for 271 yards.

A 5-11, 185-pound junior, Froehlich rallied the Bobcats to the game's only touchdown early in the fourth quarter when he connected with Bill Bagley on a five-yard pass to cap a 49-yard drive.

Froehlich started slowly and suffered several sacks for 60 yards but finally figured out Waynesburg's defense. He completed nine of his passes to Bagley for 132 yards.

"Our system is predicated on figuring out what the other team is doing and adjusting to it," Frostburg head coach Dean Peterson said. "In the second half we moved our tight end around and it confused them a little. They had some personnel covering people I think they didn't want to."

Frostburg led 3-0 on a 25-yard field goal by Roger Darus in the first quarter and added two points on a safety in the third quarter when Waynesburg's backup quarterback Tim Null was tackled in the endzone by Nolan and Marcus Wooley.

The Bobcats finished with 302 net yards on offense while Waynesburg had minus 30 yards rushing and 125 passing. The Yellow Jackets have now scored just three offensive touchdowns in 20 quarters.

"I thought we had our opportunities but we didn't take advantage of them," Tornabene said. "We played hard and the defense did a good job. We had some individual breakdowns in the secondary but until I see the film I'm not sure where. When somebody gets as many yards as they did there has to be some breakdowns."

"We did move the ball at times but without a running game it is very difficult to do things. It may require us to move some personnel."

FLAK JACKETS — Freshman running back Andre Lewis, the Jackets' leading rusher, missed the game with severe tonsillitis. Tornabene said he could be ready next week against Westminster. Bozek injured his knee in the third quarter but returned to play in the fourth.

Retires

Charles R. Finch of Waynesburg, a custodian at Waynesburg College, retired recently after 38 years of service. In honor of his service, Finch, seated, was presented with a college rocking chair by Dr. Thomas Mills Jr., college president, left, and C.B. Stoy, vice president of business and finance. Finch is a member of the VFW, Waynesburg Post and the Loyal Order of the Moose of Waynesburg.

Two Artists To Hold Workshop

WAYNESBURG — Workshops by two artists will be presented at the Greene County Historical Museum in October. The workshops will be sponsored by the Greene County Council on the Arts and the Greene County Historical Society.

Landscape painting will be taught by James M. Sulkowski of Canonsburg from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 19 and 20. Due to the popularity of the museum's dollhouse show, the organizations will also offer a class in building miniatures, which will be taught by Richard Shurtz of Pittsburgh from noon to 3 p.m. on three Saturdays, Oct. 19, 26 and Nov. 2.

Sulkowski studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and at Carnegie-Mellon University.

For five years he worked with master painter Frank Mason at The Art Students' League of New York City. He has taught painting in Allegheny and Washington counties and has held landscape painting workshops in France.

Sulkowski's paintings have been shown at galleries in New York City and Pittsburgh and at the Westmoreland County Museum of Art.

He is represented in numerous private collections and public collections in the United States, Canada and Europe.

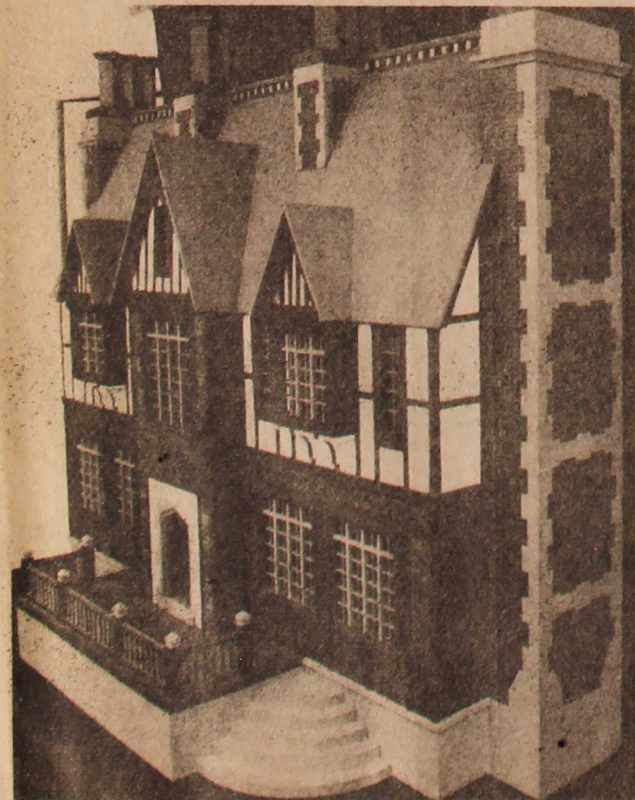

If weather permits, those who attend the local workshop will be able to paint outdoors. Sulkowski's teaching methods stress personal instruction and individual assistance.

Miniaturist Richard Shurtz received a master of fine arts degree in 1964 from Carnegie-Mellon University. He has taught at the college level and has worked as a research designer for a furniture manufacturer in Philadelphia and as a designer and production manager for an architectural design firm in Philadelphia.

He started working with miniatures in 1976, first building them as gifts. He has been working full time in the field since 1978.

High School Football

Cougars 14, Raiders 0

WAYNESBURG — Charleroi High School picked up its first victory of the season Friday night, Oct. 11, shutting down Waynesburg, 14-0, in a Section 1-AA game.

Charleroi scored once in the third and once in the fourth quarter to improve its record to 1-5 in the section and 1-6 overall.

Craig Lee scored the first touchdown on a 30-yard pass from Jim Todd, while the Cougars added another TD in the fourth on a 25-yard interception return.

The Cougars had 172 total yards on offense, gaining 93 on the ground and 79 through the air.

The Red Raiders, who fall to 0-5 in the section and 0-7 overall, gained 70 yards passing and 60 yards rushing.

Their Hobby Is Building Indian Teepees

WAYNESBURG — Pete Rumskey of Waynesburg has a unique hobby. He builds teepees.

Rumskey, manager of the Murphy's Mart in Greene Plaza, shared information on this hobby with members of the Waynesburg Rotary Club at a recent meeting.

The teepees Rumskey builds are replicas of those used by American Indians. They are authentic in nearly every detail and were constructed after extensive research at the Greene County Historic Society Museum.

Rumskey shares his hobby with another Waynesburg businessman, Richard Kalsey. It is Kalsey's property a mile west of Waynesburg where the two have constructed their first teepee. Built several weeks ago, the teepee has attracted many visitors to the site.

Rumskey told club members the idea for the teepees came to the men last winter when they were caught in a snowstorm while riding horses in the western part of the county.

"We found some temporary shelter until the snowstorm eased up," he said. "During the long wait we decided to explore the idea of easily assembled shelters for situations like this."

Rumskey said teepees were developed by the Plains Indians as a portable shelter which they could use as they roamed the open spaces of the West for hunting buffalo.

Rumskey described a typical teepee as being 14-feet high and having a 40-foot base. The interior is 11 feet wide. Rumskey said they learned that the inner poles should be fashioned from either poplar or pine trees.

"Smoke is usually no problem because the bottom liner allows for plenty of ventilation, especially in summer," he said. Not able to use buffalo hides for their covering, as did the Indians, Rumskey and Kalsey use modern materials. Rumskey said the material should be treated with a fire-resistant coating.

The two men intend to build a second teepee soon. Rumskey said their first teepee has been the scene of cook-outs and weekend outings.

"This has been a great experience for us," he said. "Our families and friends are getting to know the fellowship and relaxation we enjoy with this hobby."

Halloween Parade

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Lions Club will sponsor a Halloween parade beginning at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 24.

There will be treats for all participants and prizes for winners in several categories.

WAYNESBURG — For those adults who wish to further their education, Waynesburg College is currently scheduling courses for its continuing education program.

These non-credit courses meet for shorter periods of time than regular credit classes and are offered to interested adults for a nominal tuition fee. Continuing education units (CEU) are granted to enrollees who successfully complete the course. One CEU is granted for ten hours of classroom work.

This year, Lola Tornabene, director of the program, has established several objectives for the program.

She hopes to contact area businesses to discuss educational needs that the college would be able to address through the continuing education program or through specially arranged courses, which will be offered either at the college or at a business site.

Mrs. Tornabene also will contact all five school districts in Greene County concerning their educational needs and the part the college can play in addressing them. Courses can be offered for inservice credits in cooperation with the Intermediate Unit.

Thelma C. McNeely

Thelma C. McNeely, 63, of 1080 Ninth Street, Waynesburg, died in her home on Sunday, October 13, 1985, following an illness of three years.

She was born April 20, 1922, in Perry Township, a daughter of the late George and Mae Minor Craig, and had resided most of her life in Waynesburg.

Mrs. McNeely was a registered nurse who had trained at Canonsburg General Hospital. She was employed for many years at the Greene County Memorial Hospital, working for a number of years as night supervisor and retiring as supervising nurse in the emergency room.

She was a member of the First Christian Church of Waynesburg and of the Pennsylvania Nurses Association.

Surviving are her husband, Charles M. McNeely, whom she married September 11, 1945; a son, John W. McNeely of Waynesburg; a sister, Mrs. Gordon (Betty) Lemley of Mt. Morris, and several nieces and nephews.

A sister, Halda Younken, is deceased. A brother died in infancy.

Deceased are one daughter, June May Sloneker; and one brother, Larry Garrison.

District Allowed To 'Just Say No'

CARMICHAELS — Dr. Dolores A. Zoldos, superintendent of Carmichaels Area School District, has announced that the district has been accepted as a participant school district in the "Just Say No" smoking deterrence project.

Goal of the project, coordinated by the Washington-Greene Prevention Corporation and supported by a grant from the Washington-Greene Drug / Alcohol Planning Commission, is to provide all seventh grade students with information and skills to resist peer pressure to use the "gateway drugs" of tobacco and marijuana. The skills developed also can be applied to resist alcohol or other drugs.

One step of the project will be an anonymous pre-test and post-test of all seventh graders which will compare knowledge and attitudes toward smoking both before and after the program. This can prove a reliable tool in assessing the impact of the project.

Parents wishing to examine a copy of the test should contact the junior high office no later than Friday, Oct. 18. Anyone who does not wish his or her child to participate in the test is asked to contact Principal James Zalar no later than Tuesday, Oct. 22.

County Native In Ballet Performance

WHEELING, W.Va. — Michael Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Stephenson of Waynesburg R.D.3, will be appearing with the Indianapolis Ballet Theatre during its performance at the Capital Music Hall in Wheeling, W.Va., on Friday, Dec. 27.

The company will perform, "The Nutcracker," and Stephenson will dance the part of the Cavalier Prince.

Stephenson studied locally with Mrs. Jessie Meighen of Waynesburg and the late Jean King of Uniontown. He furthered his training at Butler University in Indianapolis where he received his bachelor of arts and master's degree in dance.

With his wife Kathryn, they toured the United States, Canada, Mexico, South America, Europe and the Far East with an NBC and Disney touring production.

Returning to the U.S. in 1976, the Stephensons joined the Indianapolis Ballet Theatre. Kathryn is now the executive director of the company and Michael is répétiteur (rehearsal master), instructor at Butler University and one of principal dancers at the theatre.

Deceased are one son, Harry A. Baker; and two brothers, the Rev. Maewood Baker and Wilbur Baker.

A.B. Miller Day

Volunteers spent a recent Saturday helping to spruce up the campus at Waynesburg College as part of A.B. Miller Day. During the annual event, alumni, faculty, staff and students lend a hand to help make the campus and surrounding community more attractive. Two of the volunteers were Lee Brown, a 1956 alumnus of the college, and his wife, Janet W. Brown, assistant director of development at the college.

B-C Board Honored

The Beth-Center Board of Education was recently honored for its efforts in the areas of curriculum and instruction. Elementary student Nichole Skrobacs, Superintendent Dr. Joseph Saeli, elementary student Mike Koval and board member Mark Husak hold the Liberty and Learning flag that was presented to the district for its curriculum and instruction programs. Beth-Center was selected as the first district to receive the flag.

Coal Mine Operations Restructured

Bethlehem Steel Corp. has announced a major restructuring of its bituminous coal operations which would affect three mines in Washington County.

Bethlehem said the Butler Division, which encompasses the former Ellsworth and Cokeburg mines which now form the Eighty Four Complex, and Mine No. 58 in Marianna, all in Washington County, and Mine No. 91 in Saxenburg, southern Butler County, will be consolidated with the Cambria Division in Cambria County, which includes Mine No. 33 near Ebensburg, and Mine No. 78 near Windber.

The new entity will be called the Pennsylvania Division and will be headed by Daniel A. Bayer, currently manager of the Butler-Ellsworth Division.

Overseeing the Pennsylvania Division will be BethEnergy Mines Inc., a Bethlehem Steel subsidiary.

Bethlehem spokesman Art Roth said it is too early to determine how many administrative employees will be affected by the merger.

Roth said the current employment level in the Butler-Ellsworth Division is approximately 1,400 people, while about 1,030 work in the Cambria Division.

The Butler-Ellsworth Division produced 3 million tons of coal in 1984. The output in the Cambria Division was 2.6 million tons.

It will be the second consolidation in three years for the mining subsidiary. In 1982 all West Virginia mines were similarly joined.

Prison Board Meets

WAYNESBURG — Members of the Greene County Prison Board recently discussed, but took no official action, on a plan to double-bunk inmates at the Greene County Jail.

The jail is at, or near, capacity daily and with the influx of weekend prisoners, the facility is being taxed to handle the inmate population. On most weekends, some prisoners are forced to sleep on cots.

Livestock Program Scheduled

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Extension Office has announced that it is accepting reservations from county residents who want to attend the annual Livestock and Pasture Field Day at Penn State's Southwestern Field Research Laboratory in Reclor.

The program will be held Saturday, Oct. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Specialists from the university and the Soil Conservation Service will discuss ways to extend the livestock grazing season. They also will talk about the best ways to meet the nutritional needs of beef cattle and sheep, ways of feeding from round-bale hay, and development of livestock watering systems.

"The program is designed to meet the needs of all beef and sheep producers and should also be of special interest to part-time farmers," County Agent William Brown said. The $4 costs covers lunch and a booklet summarizing the day's presentation.

More information is available from the extension office at 627-3745.
